CHILD BRIDE'S MOTHER SAYS SHE'LL DROP CHARGES

Mrs. Willard Jordan of Dorchester will drop charges against her daughter, Geraldine Jordan Murphy, 14-year-old bride, and the 20-year-old Dorchester youth with whom she eloped, the mother told the Boston Evening American today.

Her decision came after she had talked with little Geraldine at the home of a relative who bailed the girl yesterday at Charles Street Jail, where Geraldine and Joseph R. Murphy had been sent from Dorchester court.

Mrs. Jordan, in court, had pressed charges of abduction against Murphy and being a stubborn child against Geraldine. The hearing is set for tomorrow.

TO DROP CHARGES

"I am going to drop the charges against both," Mrs. Jordan told the Boston Evening American today.

"After serious thought I believe it would be best for both of them to be given a chance to see if they can make a go of it.

"I would never have approved of the marriage if they had asked me beforehand. I don't approve generally of a 14-year-old girl getting married. When I was notified by police that they were married, I was pretty upset at first and I said then I wouldb ring charges against both of them.

"However, I will appear in Dorchester court tomorrow morning, and I hope the court will adopt my suggestion and drop the charges.

REGRETS MARRIAGE

"It is too bad, though, that a 14-year-old girl in the seventh grade at school should be married. I brought my daughter up all alone, to the best of my ability, and I never had any trouble until the last seven months, when

Missing Airliner Clue in Mountains

Winslow, Ariz., April 5 (AP)—A possible clue developed in the White Mountains of Arizona today to the fate of the giant Douglas airliner which disappeared strangely Saturday with eight or more persons bound for New York from Burbank, Calif.

Kam Laitis, TWA airport radio operator, said a rancher had reported from near Greer, Ariz., that a "big plane" circled twice over his home at 3 p. m. Saturday as if seeking a place to land and then headed to the south where a mountain range rises.

Greer is more than 100 miles southeast of Winslow in the foothills of the White Mountains, and more than 75 miles south of the air route across northern Arizona.

JAN. 29, 1932—I went to a dance. Had every dance with a different boy. Walked home all alone in the rain, because I wanted to think about things. Bobby came along alone. Why not now?

JAN. 30, 1932—B. loves himself and nobody else. I saw him tonight. Is this infatuation or love? I think it is the latter; who could help it? We had a fight as usual. I wonder if he will call tomorrow. If he doesn't, I will.

Workers Get Firm

BEQUEST BY F. A. RUSSELL

Leaving his business entirely to his employes, the will of Frank A. Russell, prominent Brookline real estate dealer who died March 31, was filed in Dedham Probate Court today. He established the firm of Frank A. Russell, Inc., in 1892.

Management of the firm is now in the hands of three directors, who will meet soon to elect officers and determine future policies of the company, Charles E. Robinson, Brookline, one of the directors, said today.

The other two directors are Miss Anna M. Walley, Dedham, and Miss E. Lawrence Guild, 270 Bay State road, Boston.

The Russell will provides that in addition each employe shall be given $100 for each year of service, and that those employed by Russell for five years or more be paid $1500 for each five-year period.

Rest and residue of the $100,000 estate is to be divided between a step-mother, a half-brother and two half-sisters, under terms of the document drawn December 2, 1936.

Each city was also asked to check morgues and all suicides to determine if Irwin had made away with himself. He has been missing since the Saturday befor Easter Sunday.

NEW GOV. MURPHY PARLEY ON IN MOTOR STRIKE

CHRYSLER - CIO STILL AT ODDS ON PEACE

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Lansing, Mich., April 5 — With Walter P. Chrysler, industrial giant, and John L. Lewis, powerful leader of the CIO, still deadlocked on the issue of sole collective bargaining, Governor Frank Murphy's peace parley was resumed today in the State Capitol Building.

In spite of rumors that terms of a peace agreement had been reached, it was learned on excellent authority that this was not so. The conferees have been close to an agreement several times but that is as far as they have gone.

"They have blown hot and cold, and when they went into conference today they had gone back cold," one reliable sourc said.

Governor Murphy, however, continued to express optimism that not only would the Chrysler strike be settled but that other strikes which are crippling business in Michigan, the "sit-down laboratory," would soon be ended and industrial peace restored.

PEACE FOR 400,000

Governor Murphy advised reporters that the settlement "would come quickly when it does" and there was an atmosphere of expectancy in some quarters.

The Governor is also attempting to clear away the ominous threat of a sit-down in the main Ford factories.

Governor Murphy has been through long and arduous negotiations which led to the settlement of the General Motors strike. He now is in the midst of a task expected to lead to settlement of the Chrysler strike within 48 hours. He intends promptly to clean up the strikes in the Reo and Hudson factories.

Peace in the entire automobile industry, which employs more than 400,000 workers, is his main objective.

No such peace can be attained, however, if union leaders go through with their rumored intention of staging a Ford strike after the Chrysler controversy has been settled.

Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers Union, told International News Service it is not the intention of labor leaders to call a Ford strike. Nevertheless for some time back there has been a persistent rumor that Ford is "next."

General Motors, Ford and Chrysler comprise the "Big Three" of the automobile industry. General Motors employs 235,000 men, Ford 87,000 and Chrysler 67,000. At the peak of production General Motors turned out 50,000 cars a week, Ford 30,000 and Chrysler 30,000.

300,000 Miners on Job With Pay Up $85,000,000

Pittsburgh, April 5 (AP)—Three hundred thousand miners tramped back to the soft coal pits today while the consumer counted up his share of the cost in an $85,000,000 pay boost for the industry.

There were varying estimates of the ultimate cost.

J. D. Battle, executive secretary of the National Coal Association, predicted the increase, coupled with the rising cost of materials and social security taxes, would add $100,000,000 annually to the nation's fuel bill.

Spokesmen for the United Mine Workers of America, at the completion of wage agreement in New York, had estimated the pay advance would increase the price 15 cents a ton.

The contract, accepted by Appalachian operators and miners, gave workers in eastern fields a basic $6 a day wage—an increase of 50 cents over the old scale.

CIO Opens Drive for 1,000,000 in Oil Fields

Houston, April 5 (AP)—The committee for industrial organization, disclaiming any intention of sit-down strikers or a dispute with the American Federation of Labor, began its unionization drive in the oil industry today for a potential million recruits.

The A. F. of L. rushed plans for a campaign of its own April 15. The head man of the CIO drive was Harvey C. Freming, Oil Workmen's Association chief and lieutenant of John L. Lewis.

Ford Plant Strikers Back on Kansas City Jobs

Kansas City, April 5 (AP)—The first Henry Ford automobile plant to be involved in a sit-down strike called workers back to their jobs here today amid CIO claims of victory and some confusion as to settlement terms.

The Committee for Industrial Organization also announced agreement making possible the reopening of another strike-closed plant here and a decision to establish permanent headquarter in Kansas City.

Ed Hall, second international vice-president of the United Automobile Workers of America, a CIO affiliate, at first predicted there would be no seasonal layoff at the Ford assembly plant. This was denied in Detroit by Harry Bennett, personnel director of the Ford Motor Car Company.

'Sit' Crisis Confronts Deal

Byrnes Attacks Lewis' Stand

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN
Special to Boston Evening American

Washington, April 5—If the Statue of Liberty had suddenly danced a hornpipe on the Capitol dome, and stuck out her bronze tongue at the White House, the consternation in administration circles would have been about what it was when Senator Jimmy Byrnes of South Carolina spilled a whole dishful of sit-down strike beans right in the President's lap.

Senate lealers were thrown completely off balance.

For Byrnes' condemnation of the sit-down meant not merely apostasy, but an implied criticism of the President at a moment when he was under fire at both ends of the Capitol for what is alleged to be a tacit approval of the John L. Lewis system of winning a strike.

• • •

The political implications of this are likely to be far-reaching.

The revolt on the Supreme Court packing plan has spread to the strike situation, and will spread next to the President's program to reorganize the entire executive branch of the government along more centralized lines than has ever before been proposed in this country.

It is significant that Senator Bailey of North Carolina, who was in his state speaking on the court issue, caught a train for Washington when he learned of the Byrnes amendment, condemning the sit-down, to the pending Guffey coal bill. He alyigned himself with Governor Clyde R. Hoey, who took to the radio to declare that no sit-down would be permitted in his state.

• • •

John L. Lewis has pledged to extend his activities to that promising sphere of action. In South Carolina a third of the voting population is engaged in the textile industry.

A sit-down in mills of the Carolinas would carry the CIO into a vast field. In South Carolina political opinion is divided. Governor Olin D. Johnson is supporting the Washington administration. Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith is opposed to the Supreme Court plan.

• • •

Senator Byrnes has until now supported every Roosevelt policy. He has been the senator closest to the White House. He has ardently embraced the Supreme Court plan.

Thus the injection by Byrnes of the sit-down issue had started something that could not be stopped, and that something involved criticism of the administration.

Condemnation of the sit-down, which has created such apprehension in the Carloinas, came at a time when the international textile conference was sitting in Washington.

In connection between this fact and the Senate uproar started by one Carolinian, and raised to major intensity by another, Mr. Bailey, is obvious, and important.

Meanwhile Senator Cotton Ed Smith, long at odds with the administration, suddenly finds in bed with him the erstwhile fair-haired boy of that very administration.

By a curious quirk of fate the flare-up in the Senate over the sit-down will probably help Smith. Heaven knows he needs help.

PRISON GUARD SHIFT SEEN

A shake-up of guards at Charlestown state prison was expected today, in consequence of a wild fight between two long-term convicts, who choked and pummelled each other while a group of yelling inmates urged them on.

The clash, which took place in the prison print shop, climaxed a period of growing unrest and lack of discipline in the institution, reports said.

Opponents in the fracas were "Tough Guy" Harry Morgan, former Boston bandit, doing 13 to 21 years for armed robbery, and Joseph Salvo, one-time North End gunman and gangster, now serving a 12-to-15 year robbery sentence.

In Doghouse ---and Safe

Chicago, April 5 (AP)—Imagine the surprise of the Rev. Andrew Ondark, assistant pastor of St. Michael's Catholic Church, when he found his supposedly savage dog sitting in the rain while inside its kennel a man was sleeping soundly.

The Rev. Ondark telephoned for the police.

Before a squad arrived the dog apparently tired of sitting. Police said they found both the dog and man sleeping comfortably in the doghouse. They took Leo Detlow, 48, to jail.

BABY IN FIRST PEEK AT U.S.

For his first look at his native land, John Coon, III, four-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Coon of 6 Whitmore terrace, Wakefield, arrived here aboard an ocean liner today.

John was the youngest passenger aboard the Cunard-White Star liner Laconia this crossing. The ship docked here to land 35 passengers.

The baby boy was born in Basle, Switzerland, while his father was in Belgium, sturying foreign methods in the textile industry.

His mother formerly lived in Concord, N. H.

Other passengers arriving here included the Hon. Percival P. Baxter, former governor of Maine, and Major Durno Gilrath, retired, of the British army, formerly stationed in Singapore in the Malay Settlements. He is to marry Elvira Caponigri, daughter of Justice Joseph J. Caponigri, 205 East 78th street, New York.

Another couple to arrive in Boston on the Laconia, Mr. and Mrs. C. St. Quentin Bridge of London, Eng., will spend several months honeymooning in America. Bridge is a banker's representative.

40-HOUR WEEK SHUTS UP PARIS

Paris, April 5 (INS)—Virtually every large store in Paris was closed today as the new 40-hour-week regulations imposed by the Blum government went into effect.

A torrent of hostile criticism appeared in the press as a result of the decree, but thousands of workers hailed their unexpected holiday.

In the entire capital, only a few small shops were open. All the big department stores and fashion houses were closed.

The powerful newspaper L'Intransigeant, hitherto sympathetic with the "social reforms" of the Blum regime, bitterly attacked the 40-hour-week rule, charging enforced suspension of business was tantamount to "revolution."

IT'S ON THE AIR! "Jobs by the Minute" are broadcast each morning over Radio Station WORL between 7:45-8:00 A. M., one hour later on Sundays.

NEW SENATE MOVE TO CONDEMN SIT-DOWNS

Washington, April 5 (INS)—The Senate was asked today to condemn sit-down strikes as "contrary to public policy."

When the Senate convened, Senator Byrnes (D.) of South Carolina, withdrew his amendment to the Guffey coal bill, which provided that miners should be compelled to vacate company property during a strike, and substituted for it a broader and simpler denunciation of all sit-down strikes.

The substitute declared bluntly:

"It is the sense of Congress that the so-called sit-down strike is illegal and contrary to public policy.

"Congress only assumes to speak as to strikes and industries within the jurisdiction of the federal government."

Immediately after Byrnes proposed his substitute, the Senate's Democratic leader, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, moved to sidetrack Congressional declarations on the sit-down strike by sending the Byrnes proposal to committee.

Byrnes' move to put the Senate on record concerning the sit-down strikes was carefully timed, for this week the CIO opens a big drive to unionize the Southern textile industry in the Carolinas and other Southern states.

Robinson told the Senate that the sit-down issue is "too big" to be dealt with by a mere expression contained in an amendment. The Senate, he said, should inform itself thoroughly concerning the whole labor situation before rushing to take a stand on such an important matter.

CIO SEEKING INJUNCTION IN MAINE

Arrest of a strike picket for alleged assault and battery on a shoeworker marked the continuance of the Lewiston-Auburn shoe strike, called by John L. Lewis' CIO, as manufacturers continued to refuse to negotiate with the union.

Paul Doyle of Lewiston was arrested by state police in an alleged attack on Alfred Houde, Lewiston shoeworker and employe of the C. V. Watson Shoe Co.

CIO ASKS INJUNCTION

With the strike in its 11th day, CIO leaders were preparing to go into Superior Court to ask an injunction preventing police from enforcing the 500-foot rule, which keeps pickets far from the 19 Auburn and Lewiston shoe shops.

Two sit-down strikes continued in Providence, at the Phillips-Baker Rubber Co. plant and one of the factories of the American Screw Co., while a strike of jewelry workers was threatened. Two other strikes were settled. A legislative investigation of police activities was threatened by State Senator Lawrence J. Walsh, Democrat, of Lewiston.

Officials of the Phillips-Baker Rubber Co. according to their attorney, Eugene A. Kingman, cancelled plans to ask a court order [illegible] the sit-down strikers.

"There will be no attempt to evict them, but neither will there be any further negotiations, and the factory will remain closed, even if they get out," said Kingman. "The strikers will not be rehired.

"They and the CIO violated an agreement signed only two weeks ago, for higher wages and time and a half for overtime. Everybody shook hands and was satisfield, but then the CIO demanded recognition of that organization as the representative of all the employes of the company and the strike was called in violation of the signed agreement."

75 PAINTERS STRIKE

About 75 painters quit work in Lowell, demanding a raise of 10 cents an hour. The strikers, employed by 10 large contractors, said they were receiving 75 cents an hour.

Regular boat service between the mainland and the islands of Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket was resumed today after the strike of 48 employes of the steamship company was settled, with grant of a wage increase varying from 8 to 11 per cent, seniority rights, union recognition and two days vacation a month.

Twenty employes in the carding and spinning department of the Hathaway Manufacturing Co. of New Bedford went on strike today, forcing 335 others out of work. The strikers asked an adjustment of piece-work rates and work load.

President to See Harvard Musical

Washington, D. C., April 5 — Heavy duty "he-chorines" of Harvard's Hasty Pudding club musical comedy, "Come Across," cavort here tonight for an audience likely to include President and Mrs. Roosevelt and many of the national capital's notables.

Permission to Wed In Jail Requested By Revere Man

Worcester, April 5—Permission to marry—in jail—was requested today by Robert D. Wallace, 31, of Rever, who is being held for trial under $75,000 bail in connection with the $125,000 Kennedy jewel robbery.

Refusing to name the girl, although indicating she lived in Boston, the prisoner applied to Sheriff H. Oscar Rocheleau for the privilege of holding a county jail wedding.

The fact that two other men, already tried and convicted in the same case, are serving sentences of 15 to 20 years each in state prison, did not seem to bother Wallace.

Sheriff Rocheleau said he reminded his prisoner of that fact, but Wallace insisted, adding that his reason for insisting was none of the sheriff's business.

"I'll take it under consideration and let you know later," the sheriff finally said.

Wallace, as were Samuel Linden of Boston and Joseph Bellina of Newark, N. J., who were sent to state prison, is charged with armed robbery of Mrs. William J. Kennedy at her home in Southboro last November. He was arrested late last month in Providence and his trial is scheduled for May.

'Queen of Queens' Visits Boston

Mademoiselle from Paris has arrived in Boston!

The queen of queens, Mme. Madeleine de Charpin came in today, a trifle disconcerted by the fact there was no one to meet her, but still smiling and charming when photograpners arrived, 15 minutes late.

"I adore America," she smiled, clasping her hands, as morning rush crowds gaped in the South Station.

Platinum blonde, petite, Mme. Charpin is here with her companion, M. Germaine Johnson, to greet city officials in the name of the Paris Exposition of 1937, and to invite them over.

"We want all America to come," she said.

Denmark's King Thrown by Horse

JOHNSON TO AID TEXTILE TRADE

BABY ESCAPES DEATH BY 'A FRACTION OF AN INCH'

PIN Lodged in THROAT

SAVED BY SKILL OF PHYSICIAN

A seven-months-old Somerville baby boy was a "fraction of an inch" from death for eight hours with an open safety pin lodged in his throat.

He is Francis Reardon, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Reardon of 11 Durham street, Somerville.

Too young to realize how close he had been to death, the chubby, red-faced youngster was smiling and happy today.

From his mother, who held the flashlight unwaveringly while Dr. Samuel E. Chalfen of Cambridge street, Cambridge, removed the pin from its dangerous position, came the story.

Opens Pin

The baby, around noon last Friday, was playing in the home of his aunt at 63 Magnolia street, Cambridge, Mrs. Reardon began. He was wrapped in a blanket, one part of which was held together by a safety pin.

Baby Francis in kicking his feet, accidentally opened the pin, then reached for it and put it, open, into his mouth.

Not until 8 o'clock that night did Mrs. Reardon, puzzled by the infant's moans and apparent illness, call Dr. Chalfen who, upon looking into the throat, saw the pin.

"We'll have to take a chance and get it out," he said; and, while the nervous mother held the flashlight over the child's open mouth, Dr. Chalfen removed the pin.

Fraction of Inch

"The point of the pin was caught so it could not slip down the throat," the physician stated, "but if it had penetrated but a fraction of an inch further, it would have penetrated the esophagus. Then the baby would have died.

"It is, indeed, a wonder he did not choke to death. The parents knew nothing of the pin until I saw it. They thought the baby might have caught a slight cold," he added.

Said Mrs. Reardon:

Mother's Hand Unwavering at Crucial Moment for Infant

A "fraction of an inch" from death was the terse comment of Dr. Samuel E. Chalfin of Cambridge after he removed an open safety pin from the throat of seven-months-old Francis Reardon, Jr., of Durham street, Somerville. The infant swallowed the pin which had been fastened to the blanket wrapped around him. Eight hours after the baby swallowed the pin it was discovered when Dr. Chalfen was summoned. Re-enacting the removal of the pin are Mrs. Reardon, right, holding the flashlight; Baby Francis, center, not too happy just at this moment, and Dr. Chalfen, right, who performed the life-saving feat in a few second.

New York, April 5 (US)—How would you like to try to give away $4,000,000?

No fooling. There's a man here in New York who has $4,000,000 that he's actually got to give away. Would you like to be in his shoes?

The job sounds simple enough, perhaps, but he says it's a $4,000,000 headache. It's driven him, he says, to live like a fugitive. He doesn't know what to do about it.

The man is James Jay Morgan, head of the Hall & Ruckel Drug Co. A happy, carefree person once, his trouble began when Martha M. Hall, Fifth avenue spinster, died in 1935 and named him sole executor of her estate.

Forced to Hide

In a closely guarded, secret hideaway Mr. Morgan eyed a Universal Service reporter accusingly as he said:

"I suppose you can sit there and give me a dozen good, sensible ways to dispose of this money?"

Reminded that "constructive human welfare" covers a wide range, he said irately:

But Miss Hall stipulated that however the money is used, it must establish a lasting memorial to her father. That word "lasting" is proving the killjoy in Mr. Morgan's otherwise routine assignment as a proxy philanthropist. This 1937 Santa Claus explained:

"So far as I have been able to determine, there is nothing in these changing times that $4,000,000 can buy that will be lasting."

Since publication of Miss Hall's unique will, Mr. Morgan declared, he has been besieged by countless persons and institutions, seeking a slice of the bequest. He said:

"My office was robbed. I had no peace, day or night. I had to give up my apartment on Madison avenue and move to Westchester. I had to barricade every place I went and slink in and out like a thief. It got so that I was a harder man to see than the President of the United States."

Fan Mail Heavy

But harried though he was, he set about carrying out the provisions of the will as best he could. He established the Martha M. Hall foundation for control of the fortune and invited four other business men to act with him in the directorate.

Thousands of letters are pouring in on him bearing every conceivable suggestion as to how the money might be disbursed, he said.

Graves Stripped By Vandal Gang

Worcester, April 5—Theft of lead strips from the bottom of nearly 20 tombstones in the Old Swedish cemetery on Webster street was revealed by police here today.

The tombstones, including one which weighed 800 pounds, were discovered overturned. In explaining the motive, police declared that these lead strips could be sold very easily because of the high price of this metal.

HUNT FIEND AS KILLER OF N. H. WOMAN, CHILD

The victims were Mrs. Edna A. Worden, 48, a Works Progress Administration worker, and Marguerite Estelle Worden.

It was with a brick, likewise, that two other women were recently murdered in this city and half a dozen more attacked.

In none of the previous crimes was there found any evidence pointing to the identity of the guilty person.

Today, however, investigators, for the first time, had something definite to go on.

They said several of the fingerprints were clear and the footprints, in the murder apartment and in soft earth outside a window, showed a peculiar type of fibre shoe sole.

Mother and daughter had apparently been asleep when the slayer crept into their combination living room bedroom in the Astoria apartment hotel.

On one bed in the Worden apartment lay the nearly nude body of the blonde, curly-haired school girl, Marguerite.

Mrs. Worden Native Of Manchester, N. H.

Manchester, N. H., April 6—Wilbur Blood, brother of Mrs. Edna Worden, who was slain with her daughter in Los Angeles, said today he did not know how to break the news to his mother, 76, widow.

"It will be a terrible shock, because mother has been talking all the time about Edna and her little girl, since she received a letter from them last week," said Blood.

"Edna hasn't been home for four years and my mother was yearning to see her and little Marguerite. I didn't tell her last night because I knew it would mean a sleepless night for her. But I'll have to tell her soon. The bodies will be brought here for burial."

WED 14 YEARS AGO

Mrs. Worden, victim of the brutal and mysterious slaying, was a native of this city and a graduate, in 1912, of Manchester Central high school. She also attended eKene Normal school.

Fourteen years ago at Goffstown, she married Raymond Worden, a New York veteran who, according to her brother, is now a patient at a veterans' hospital in Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

"From here she went to New York, then to Jacksonville, Fla., and then to Los Angeles," said her brother.

BURIAL IN N. H.

"She was the eldest and was mother's favorite.

"I haven't been officially notified of the deaths yet, but friends in New York are arranging to bring the bodies here, and I expect them Friday.

"Mother's resting now but I'll have to tell her something about it when she wakes up."

TRICK SHOT KILLS HIS MASTER

New York, April 5 (AP)—Paddy, faithful German shepherd dog, lay watchfully today beside the bier of the master he killed by accident.

Mounted Patrolman Patrick Conroy was dead because he trained the dog too well. Conroy went home from duty yesterday morning, and, unthinking, drew his service revolver to lock it in a buffet drawer.

But Paddy was in the room and Conroy had trained Paddy never to let anyone draw a gun. The three-year-old dog leaped for his master's wrist and knocked him down—just as he so often had done in practice. The revolver discharged, the bullet ripping through Conroy's chest.

Mrs. Conroy ran to her husband's side. The dog licked his hand. Neighbors called an ambulance and the police.

To his brother officers, the wounded policeman said: "Don't blame Paddy. He did what he thought was right."

Conroy died a half-hour later.

The investigators didn't believe the dying man's story at first. Conroy's ten-year-old stepson, William Dissert, proved it was true.

He flourished a toy pistol. Without even a growl, Paddy seized the boy's wrist, close up to the gun, in his great fangs. Then gently shook the toy loose.

Holding the open safety pin, which her seven-months-old baby son swallowed is Mrs. Francis Reardon of 11 Durham street, street, Somerville. Baby Francis, Jr., swallowed an open pin and it was lodged in his throat for eight hours until removed by Dr. Samuel E. Chalfen of Cambridge. The doctor said the baby was a fraction of an inch from death during the entire eight hours. He explained that the pin, had it penetrated the esophagus, would have brought instant death.

Horse Stages 'Sit' On Feet Of Driver

Something new in way of a "sit-down strike," but with a more serious effect as far as John R. Sullivan of Cheever street, Charlestown, is concerned, occurred today on Bunker Hill street, Charlestown.

Cheever, a milkman, was making his early morning deliveries as usual. He was walking alongside the horse when a harness strap suddenly broke.

The horse suddenly stopped and then very gently sat down—on Sullivan's feet. Sullivan was taken to Haymarket Relief Hospital where he was treated for cuts and bruises of his right ankle.

Meanwhile the horse sat on the pavement for nearly an hour, unaware that many a person would have his cereal without milk this morning and absolutely unmindful to the many automobile horns.

It seems the horse was somewhat in the way of traffic, too.

Mexican Women Vote

Mexico City, April 5 (INS)—A quarter of a million women—a record—voted in Sunday's congressional primaries, the National Revolutionary party estimated today.

Crooks' Nemesis

NEW WAY TO MARK RANSOM CASH

New York, April 5 (AP)—Discovery of two new tools for scientific crime detection, one a light that reveals fingerprints never before visible, and the other a method of marking ransom money so a suspected bill will shine like a glowworm, was made public today.

Both came from the Bell Telephone laboratories, under direction of Dr. Francis F. Lucas, one of the world's foremost metallurgists.

Dr. Lucas discovered the method, which mineralizes the prints and makes them permanent, in contrast to present silver nitrate and iodine fuming methods which are "fugitive," tending to fade. The prints mineralize in the fumes of Flemming's reagent, a chemical made of three acids, chromic, osmic and glacial acetic, a preparation used by biologists as a fat fixative.

The surfaces carrying the indestructible prints were soaked with dyes invisible under light, but which fluoresce, that is, shine like glowworms, under the invisible rays.

The new method of marking ransom money uses similar invisible dyes. A bill can be dipped entire, or painted with any design, any place. It afterward has no odor, no crinkling, no sign of any sort.

All New England Is Ready For Army Day Observances

Patriotic Groups to Join in Program Tomorrow

Twenty years ago, tomorrow, the United States entered the World War.

Tomorrow, throughout the nation, Army Day will be celebrated in observance of that momentous date in history.

From the Atlantic seaboard to the Pacific, demonstrations will be held in cities and towns as well as every Army post.

Anti-aircraft guns will roar, machine gun drills will be staged, sham battles, platoon drills and radio broadcasts of patriotic nature, will enliven the day's activities.

In the New England sector, civic and military leaders will join in the patriotic observance.

PROGRAM AT FORTS

United States Army posts located in New England have planned drills and flag raising exercises as well as "open house."

In orders to the commandants of the local army posts Major-General Fox Conner, commander of the 1st Corps Area, has requested observance of Army Day be held in conformity with President Roosevelt's Army Day proclamation.

At Fort Devens, Ayer, regular Army troops will hold dress parade and drills on the parade grounds during the morning and afternoon. At Fort Banks, Winthrop, members of the Coast Artillery will hold open house and inspection, which the public has been invited to attend.

Welcome signs will also be hung over the entrances to Fort W. G. Wright, New London, Conn., Fort Adams at Newport, R. I., and Forts Williams, Preble and McKinley in Maine.

Governor Charles F. Hurley has asked that the people of the Commonwealth participate in public observances of the day. The governor issued a proclamation calling upon the citizenry to observe tomorrow by the flying of flags from public and business buildings and appropriate exercises in the schools throughout the state.

VETERANS TO JOIN

In addition to the regular army plans and the Chief Executive's proclamation, leaders of veteran organizations also urged to join in the observance of the day.

Dr. William P. Ryan of Holyoke, State Commander of the American Legion, in a statement to legionnaires said:

"Twenty years ago tomorrow the United States declared war on Germany. With the passing of the years memories of that day dim and observances commemorating it and what Army Day now stands for grow vivid.

"In recent years Army Day, in addition to fostering memorial services, has served to acquaint Americans with a clearer, more intelligent and sympathetic understanding of our land forces and their needs.

"Army Day is one day on which we should all take a few minutes off from our daily work and divert attention to the significance of the army and what it means to each and every citizen of the United States. The State Department of the American Legion urges the observances of this day by every member."

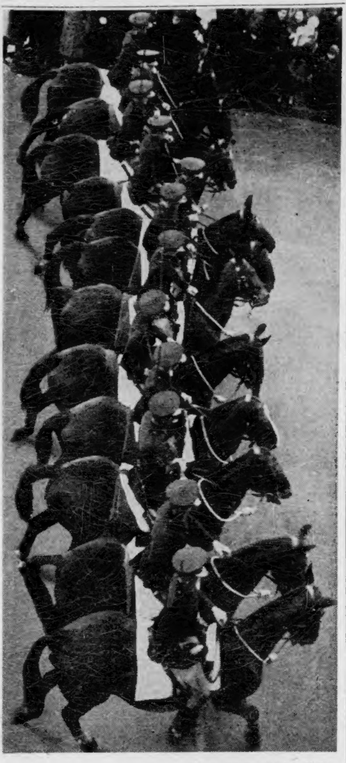
DINNER PLANNED

The Boston chapter of the Military Order of the World War will hold its annual Army Day banquet in the Hotel Victoria tomorrow evening. Representatives of military organizations, Regular Army officers and leaders of state and city governments will be present at the affair.

Oscar C. Bohlin, commander of the Greater Boston chapter, will be in charge of the Army Day banquet assisted by other chapter executives and members.

Another affair of importance will be held by members of the Quartermaster Reserve Officers of the Boston District, First Corps Area, U. S. Army. The reserve officers will hold a banquet at the Hotel Brunswick tomorrow night.

John O'Neil, secretary and treasurere of the organization and a first lieutenant in the Quartermaster Reserve Corps, is chairman of the dinner committee.



Boston Evening American Photo

With Army Day upon us, the 110th Cavalry is ready for the observance. Here they are in perfect line, going through a difficult evolution on preparation for the celebration. Every patriotic organization in New England is making efforts to make the day a memorable one.

Workers Bare Arms Sabotage in Britain

By THOMAS C. WATSON

London, April 5 (US)—More than $500,000 is poured annually into Great Britain to corrupt its workers to sabotage British industrial operations especially progress of the nation's rearmament plan, it was charged here.

To offset this Britain is spending a much larger sum. Scotland Yard has been sifting a continuous stream of letter from workers who complain about the subversive activities of radicals.

During the past few weeks, the letters reported, especially in aircraft factories and aircraft engine works, the schedule set down by the government has been ruined by a series of small keyworkers coming out on unofficial strikes.

Deliberate sabotage of the machinery of aircraft work, thus imperiling the lives of the Royal Air force personnel is charged.

The British workers tell of the "Ca' Canny" movement, under which the men deliberately go slow and lessen their production to the lowest possible minimum and that often—in fact nearly always—disorganizes the whole system of produqction.

Official trades unions are trying to stamp out this menace themselves, as organized labor here is still reluctant to call in the police to solve a problem which they aver is purely an industrial one.

Soviet influence, it is further charged, among the soldiers, sailors, airmen and government dockyard workers constitutes the greatest menace to the government's peace of mind.

DEAN SOMMER SEES POLITICS IN COURT PLAN

Washington, April 5 (AP)—Frank H. Sommer, dean of the New York University law school, denounced the Roosevelt court bill before the Senate Judiciary Committee today as hostile to the spirit of the Constitution. He proposed Constitutional amendments instead.

In an atmosphere made tense by the possibility of a Supreme Court decision on the Wagner Labor Act, he challenged the administration's course as a potential threat to judicial independence.

"Surely we can not—we dare not," his statement said, "lightly pave the way to a return to conditions of those days when the Federal judicial system was so drawn into the vortex of partisan politics—when the Federal courts were regarded by a large proportion of the people to be a political adjunct of a political party. Yet that is what the bill may do."

4 SENATORS WATCHED

Leaders of the forces for and against the President on the issue especially watched the four uncommitted members for any effect testimony by Sommer or by Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of "The Nation," might have.

There were indications that one or more of these senators—O'Mahoney (D-Wyo), McCarran (D-Nev), Hatch (D-NM) and McGill (D-Kan) might soon disclose his hand.

Asserting there was some justification for charges that the Supreme Court had "distorted the Constitution by tortured construction" in some cases, Sommer contended:

"The President's Constitutional theory as to the powers of Congress, however, would if an augmented court gave it effect not only result in departure from sound principles in exceptional cases, but would make the departure universal."

"If Congress believes aged justices should retire," Sommer asked, "why not proceed in constitutional mode to guard at least against recurrence of this situation by amendment limiting the holding of judicial office by future appointees to attainment of the age of 70 or 75 years?"

PROPOSES AMENDMENT

Other amendments he broached included:

Covering the essence of the pending bill, but effecting the court changes gradually.

Simplifying and clarifying the procedure of constitutional amendment.

Authorizing declaration judgments by the court, at least on some types of legislation, on request of the President.

In conclusion, Sommer suggested that Congress establish an agency to study social and economic problems confronting the country and recommend remedies to be effected "under the Constitution as interpreted by the court."

REBELS GAIN IN BIG DRIVE

Vitoria, Spain, April 5 (AP)—General Emilio Mola's northern army advanced to within six miles of strategic Durango, Insurgent headquarters reported today, in its powerful drive on the Basque capital of Bilbao.

Insurgent columns stormed the mountain peaks ringing Bilbao after occupying Ochandiano, commanders declared, and took control of the villages of Olaeta, Verderin and Monchategua.

The htrust carried the Insurgent front line three miles further toward their immediate objective of Durango, from which Mola's army coudl roll 16 miles downhill toward Bilbao over paved highways.

Some Red prisoners said they were wounded by their own comrades because they refused to battle the advancing Insurgents.

29 U. S. Citizens Held As Would-Be Reds

Toulouse, France, April 5 (AP)—Twenty-nine men identified by police as United States citizens today faced charges of attempting to enter Spain to join the government army, an offense under the French law punishable by six-month prison sentences and heavy fines.

The Americans were arrested at midnight Saturday as they started across the Franco-Spanish border near Toulouse.

Officials said the men had bona fide United States passports, but said most of them were of European origin.

The men, held in the Toulouse prison, proclaimed their innocence and declared they were going to Spain merely as sightseers.

THE BRIGHTER SIDE

By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright, 1937, by King Features, Syndicate, Inc. International and all other rights reserved.

It is not difficult to understand why Miami, Florida, has forged ahead of Reno, Nevada, in the matter of divorces since the first of the year. In Miami, a sun-cure is thrown in with every divorce.

Damon Runyon

This is a great inducement to the lady clients. They generally arrive at divorce proceedings pretty much tuckered out. Their nerves are apt to be shot to pieces. They are likely to be pale, and haggard. Who could live with those beezarks they are married to and be otherwise?

An experienced Miami attorney will direct a lady client of this type to the nearest sun-cabinet as soon as he draws up her complaint. If he is a thoughtful attorney, he may stake her to a bottle of olive oil in one of its many disguises, as a prevention for sun-burn. The experienced Miami attorney knows that a sun-burned lady client is prone to querulousness.

Sun Kissed

Once in the sun-cabinet, however, the lady client is all right. She can lie there by the hour, soaking in the kind sun, which will soothe her tired nerves, and restore her bodily vigor. Presently she will feel so good, and so strong, that she will find herself regretting that she did not take a club to the defendant in the case in which she is the plaintiff, by way of parting.

By the time the judge gets around to knocking off her matrimonial shackles, the lady client is as brown as an old polo saddle, and as healthy looking as if nothing had ever happened to her. She is in rare trim for her next marriage. That Miami sun is a great thing.

Reno, Nevada, has its sun, too, of course. But Reno has neglected making anything of it in the bidding for the divorce trade. Moreover, it has become noised about that the clients frequently emerge from Reno with their legs bowed from riding horses on the dude ranches.

Anyway, in the first three months of 1937, Reno has dropped behind Miami to the extent of 179 divorce cases, the score for January, February, and March being: Miami, 644; Reno, 465. This is an increase for Miami over the first three months of 1936 of 84 cases, and a decline for Reno of 130.

42 Actions

Last Saturday between the hours of 9 and high noon, when the office closed, forty-two divorce actions were filed in the circuit court of Miami, which is believed to be a record of some kind.

The only explanation that can be offered for this sudden rush is that it was the last day of horse racing for 1937 in Miami. Many sun cabinets that had been occupied all winter by horse players taking the sun-cure for their high blood pressure, became vacant, and the lady clients who had been on the waiting list wished to move in.

The only set rule on the occupancy of a sun-cabinet in Miami by a lady client taking the sun-cure, is that she must refrain from thinking of what that guy she is getting the divorce from did to her. A lady client who was occupying a Miami sun-cabinet last Friday got to thinking in this wise, according to report, and had a fit, and tore the sun-cabinet into slivers.

The week before, the lady could scarcely lift the pen to sign her bill of complaint. Suddenly she was as strong as a couple of lions. It shows what that Miami sun-cure will do.

The client must reside a period of ninety days in Florida before going into court to request the sundering of those solemn vows.

It used to be a year. The Florida legislators shortened up the period with the idea of nabbing some of the divorce business that was taking cash customers to Reno, and other states of rapid divorce.

Ninety days just about covers the more exciting part of the winter season in Florida, and the divorce clients who are not partial to sun-cabinets can build up to their divorces while going around to cocktail parties.

It is at these parties that the plaintiff frequently encounters the defendant, and vice versa, and under the influence of the moon, and the cocktails, calls everything off.

9 Grounds

There are nine different grounds upon which a divorce may be granted in Florida.

These grounds include desertion, cruelty, natural impotency, habitual indulgence in violent and ungovernable temper, habitual drunkenness, prior divorce in another state not recognized in Florida, and certain grounds relating to consanguinity, and misegnation.

Cruelty is said to be the popular ground among the Florida clients, and Dade County, of which Miami is the county seat, is getting most of the business. It is furnished mainly by New Yorkers and middle westerners.

The lady clients seem to fancy cruelty more than any other ground. Cruelty may be physical, or mental.

Mental cruelty has a wide range. Mental cruelty may be laughing at the wife's hats. It may be repeating the same story to her 1500 times. It may be insisting on her associating with our friends, or relatives. Mental cruelty is really what readies up the lady clients for the Miami sun-cure.

40 BURGLARIES CONFESSED BY YOUTH

A 19-year-old Dorchester youth whose conscience bothered him so acutely he gave himself up to Dudley street station police and admitted he was the "boudoir bandit" responsible for more than 40 breaks in Roxbury, Mattapan and Dorchester, was to face a police lineup today.

Astonished by the candid manner in which the youth revealed his crime career, and then proved he was telling the truth, police were anxious to have him viewed by victims of holdups throughout Greater Boston.

In the quiet hours of Sunday morning the telephone in the Dudley street station rang and a voice said:

"I am the boudoir bandit. I want to make a clean breast of everything. Send the car for me at Quincy and Warren streets."

FEARED HOAX

Sergeant Albert Madden, believing he was talking to a jokester, told the person at the other end of the wire to take a cab into the station and he would pay for it.

A few minutes later Leonard Cantillo, 19, of Harvard street, Dorchester, walked into the station with a taxi driver. Sergeant Madden paid the fare.

Then, while a group of police listened skeptically, Cantillo recited a long list of his crimes, including 40 burglaries, a handbag snatching, two auto thefts and five robberies from intoxicated persons.

He told his audience he was so conscience-stricken and so worried he would eventually land in police hands that he "had to confess."

Then he took police on a lengthy tour through Dorchester, Mattapan and Roxbury, pointing out the places he had broken into. Many of the places had not been reported to police, but a check proved Cantillo to be telling the truth.

Shortly after he started his crime career about 18 months ago, he said he broke into the home of former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, on Welles avenue, Dorchester, and stole two fur coats.

BURNED FUR COATS

When he learned whose home it was he was afraid to sell the coats and burned them in a vacant lot. After that, he said, he stole only cash and played "lone wolf" because it was safer.

He went to New York last September he said, when police were "hot on his trail" and spent the $1000 he had with him on girls and liquor. When he went broke he returned to Boston three days ago, determined to tell all and relieve his mind.

Cantillo said his father died five years ago and his mother one year ago. Since then he has lived with relatives on Harvard street, he said.

He was driven to crime because he could not get a job, he said. Police said he had realized about $1500 from his various breaks.

In Lineup

Conscience striken, Leonard Cantillo, 19, confessed, police say, to 40 boudoir burglaries, netting him $1500 in 18 months. Money, he said, was spent on girls.

U. S. AT SUGAR PARLEY STARTS PEACE DRIVE

London, April 5 (INS)—The United States government today will formally launch a new move designed ultimately to stem Europe's plunge towards war annd preserve the peace of the world.

America's action will be set under way by Norman H. Davis, ambassador-at-large, in his speech tonight to the diplomatic representatives of 21 nations attending the international sugar conference.

The former premier appealed to the nations attending to sacrifice immediate interests for the common good, "in order that the world sugar industry may be given some assurance of stability and order."

Davis will ask the principal nations of the world to work out an international agreement for control of sugar production as the first step towards economic disarmament.

Hunger Drives 2 Runaway Girls To Police

Two girls in their 'teens, who were "fed up" with their home town because it was so quiet, were picked up by Brighton police today —hungry, tired and wishing they were home again.

They identified themselves as Geraldine Robert, 16, and Josephine Stebbie, 17, of Aldenville, a small town a few miles outside of Springfield.

And what's more, they told police, who fed them and notified the Stebbie family, with whom the Robert girl also lived, they had been to New York, seen the sights and left there because they were penniless.

Patrolman Charles Bell saw the youngsters look, hungrily, into the windows of several food stores. He followed them, and their tracks led right to the door of the Brighton police station.

After he saw both girls walk up to the door of the station several times and then turn away, apparently afraid, Patrolman Bell came up and convinced them that it was probably the best place for them.

Boys Escape from Everett Police

Two boys, thought to have escaped fro mthe Lyman School of Correction, were driven from a stolen automobile and escaped from police in a chase through Everett today.

Officers in a cruising car followed an automobile speeding up Broadway and forced the car over to the curb. Two boys jumped out, ran through back yards in the Everett Square district. Several shots were fired by police.

The car was found to be one reported stolen in Framingham.

Coma Woman's Hearing Resumes

Los Angeles, April 5 (US)—Fears of jail attaches that Helen Wills Love, convicted husband-slayer, might be relapsing into another coma were dispelled after they found her singing in her cell at the county jail.

Near the close of Saturday's insanity hearing, Mrs. Love complained of feeling faint and a sensation of numbness. Today as the insanity hearing was to resume, she declared she was feeling fine.

Lily Irked by Wound to Errol

Flynn Shot in Spain? Wife Trails Rumor

By DAVID P. SENTNER

International News Service Staff Correspondent

(Copyright, 1937.)

London April 5—The salty Spanish saga of Errol Flynn, dashing hero of the silver screen, gripped Hollywood-conscious Europe today.

But whether the actor really was wounded by a stray bullet on the Madrid battlefront or lounged whole and unscatched in the lobby of a luxurious hotel was a matter for keen speculation—with several versions of his Spanish adventure to choose from.

Lily Damita, actress wife of Flynn, received a telephone call last night from a London friend reporting he had been "killed" near Madrid. Then followed hours of frantic telephoning and final relief when it became apparently established he had suffered nothing more serious than a slight flesh wound on the face.

But the Spanish press agency, with headquarters in London, felt it incumbent to investigate the matter even more thoroughly and in response to a telegraphed query received this dramatic "war bulletin:"

"Flynn, dressed in smart grey suit, seen in sitting Lounge Madrid hotel last night talking to Professor J. B. S. Haldane and Ernest Hemingway, American novelist."

"Someone," said Lily when confronted with the dispatch, "ought to be shot for this.

"I have run myself ragged for hours getting in touch with the British foreign office and others in search of information. It is a great relief to hear he is okay."

Exact whereabouts of the tall, handsome actor remained something of a mystery. It was fairly definitely established, however, that he had left Madrid. Lily said she thought he was on his way to Barcelona to board a British warship to return to England.

The actress poured out her thanks in a torrent of emotional words when she was informed that latest information said Flynn had been only slightly wounded.

Her only worry as she prepared to dash fom Leeds castle in Kent to the foreign office here was whether the reported injury to Flynn's handsome Irish face would mar his film career.

Flynn, star of "Captain Blood," the "Charge of the Light Brigade" and "The Green Light," entered Spain March 27 on a press visa, and planned to write for a British syndicate.

Storm Warning Given to Boston

Southeast storms were predicted from Cape Hatteras, N. C., to Boston, with the disturbance over the Middle Gulf States expected to move north-northeastward, attended by strong southeast winds and rain.

For Boston and vicinity, rain was predicted tonight, with temperatures near 40.

Suspect Held for Theft from Officer

Denying he had made the mistake of taking a billfold from the pocket of a special service squad patrolman, Benjamin Peransky, 50, of Hanson street, South End, appealed a six months' sentence in Municipal Court today.

Peransky had been found guilty by Judge Francis J. Good of taking the wallet from Officer Leo Hearn during a fight outside a Dover street tavern. He was held in $3000. He said he found the pocketbook, containing $50, on the floor of the tavern.

ROOSEVELT ASKS CCC OF 300,000 BE SET UP

Washington, April 5 (INS)—In a special message to Congress, President Roosevelt today recommended that the Civilian Conservation Corps be made a permanent part of the federal setup, with a maximum enrollment of 300,000 youths.

The President's recommendation came on the fourth birthday of the CCC, which was created April 5, 1933, by executive order.

In setting the maximum of 300,000, Mr. Roosevelt was resisting demands made by various sections of the country that the forest army be maintained at a personnel of 250,000 to 400,000.

WOULD AFFECT TREASURY

He advised Congress that his best information indicated that 300,000 boys represented the maximum enrollment that might be expected from relief families and he added that to go beyond this number "would seriously affect the financial situation of the Treasury."

"I am convinced that there is ample useful work in the protection, restoration and development of our national resources," the President declared, "upon which the services of the corps may be employed advantageously for an extended future period. It should be noted that this program will not in any respect reduce normal employment opportunities for our adult workers: in fact, the purchase of simple materials of food and clothing and of other supplies required for the operations of the corps tends to increase employment in industry.

ASKS $300,000,000

"I recommend, therefore, that provision be made for a permanent corps of 300,000 youths (and war veterans) together with 10,000 Indians and 5000 enrollees in our territories and insular possessions. It would appear, after a careful study of available information, that, with improved business conditions these numbers represent the maximum expected enrollment."

The President recommended an appropriation of $300,000,000 for maintenance of the CCC in his budget message of last January.

Mid-Ocean Tragedy

Berlin, April 5 (INS)—With one seaman dead and her captain injured, the North German Lloyd freighter Borkum limped slowly toward the Azores under her own power today following a battle with a terrific gale which tore away her bridge and rudder.

The luxury passenger liner Bremen, which answered an SOS from the wallowing freighter, was unable to launch a lifeboat to take Captain Baronsky from the Borkum for emergency treatment. Two other vessels were expected at the scene shortly.

Captain Baronsky was injured and Seaman George Rockewek killed when mountainous waves wrenched away the freighter's bridge.

The Bremen veered 300 miles from her course to rush to the Borkum's aid, but after standing by all night, continued on toward Bremerhaven. The steamer Stubaldo remained standing by, while the German training ship Schlesien and the passenger liner Schwaben were due at the scene momentarily.

POLICE NAME SCULPTOR AS RONNIE SLAYER

Nationwide Hunt Based on Diary

"dynamite diary" and it is now believed that it was he, not Robert Floyer, referred to as the "Bobby" of the diary's passionate pages.

Irwin, an inmate of Rockland County State Hospital for three years—from July, 1933, to July, 1936, had been a former lodger at the apartment of Mrs. Mary Gedeon and was violently in love with Ronnie. Last fall he entered divinity school, but was expelled four weeks ago.

According to police, the youth had inexplicably come to this city the Thursday before the triple slaying and had hired a room near the Gedeon apartment. He held it only a day, was seen near the apartment a few hours before the murders, then dropped from sight.

With the messages to all principal cities and all state police headquarters asking for Irwin's "arrest for triple homicide," went the plea:

"Give immediate attention."

Irwin's violent and unrequited passion for Ronnie grew out of his long and close association with her when he roomed in the Gedeon apartment, police said.

What caused police to change from their "wanted for questioning" to "wanted for homicide" alarm was not divulged.

It was possible, however, that they made the change because of contents of Irwin's diary, found this afternoon with the possessions he abandoned in a room he had rented at Canton, N. Y., while attending St. Lawrence University.

Once, before he left the Gedeons, he had apparently argued Ronnie into allowing him to make a life-mask of her lovely features. That was found in the Gedeon apartment.

Why Irwin was forced to give up his studies at St. Lawrence is cloaked in mystery. He was asked to leave after a quarrel with a fellow student, police reported. Yet he remained living in Canton until the Thursday before the murders.

Ronnie's "dynamite diary" — so termed by one of the high police officials who has the thick brown book in his possession—opens with Ronnie, a 15-year-old sophomore at Bryant high school and closes when she is only 18, but a disillusioned sophisticate.

TELLS OF HER LOVES

The fervid entries in its pages, most of which police have temporarily refused to reveal, disclose the innermost thoughts of a young girl blossoming into womanhood.

In it are mentioned the "men" of her life, what she thought of them, what she did with them, and what they wanted of her.

With the 150 names that are written in the girl's "little black date book" and the comments in that date book, police are confident that they have at last opened the trail that will eventually lead to the crazed killer who strangled Ronnie and her mother and stabbed their lodger, Frank Byrnes, through the brain.

Ronnie calls her father "spineless and irresponsible" in one notation in her "dynamite diary." She tells of a previous marriage of her sister, now Mrs. Joseph Kudner, which ended with the suicide of the sister's first husband.

Police did not hesitate to indicate that Irwin's name was written into the book frequently, but they would not disclose for the moment the entries relating to him.

In revealing the search for the young, erratic sculptor, Deputy Chief John A. Lyons said today:

"Of all the suspects we have had in the case, this man is the one we want to talk to most."

Irwin is the son of a woman evangelist in Portland, Ore., police said. She is estranged from her husband and the family has broken up. Irwin is said to have a brother serving a long-term felony sentence in Oregon State penitentiary.

He is said to have done decorative work in a Hollywood movie studio before drifting to New York to start an uncertain career in sculpture in this city.

HIS NOTABLE WORK

He has made likenesses of both President Roosevelt and Marlene Dietrich and sold them for large sums, it was reported, and he had an idea of his own ability that prompted him to tell doctors at the psychopathic hospital:

"I shall become the greatest sculptor the world has ever known—greater even than Michelangelo. I must divert all my strength to my work."

Acquaintances of Irwin told the detectives in Canton that they recalled him having said last fall that he was "in love with a Hungarian girl." Both Ronnie's father and mother were Hungarian-born, although the girl was born in the United States.

About the cause of Irwin leaving the divinity school was drawn a veil of secrecy. It was learned by detectives, however, that the student with whom Irwin quarreled "over a question of ethics," had demanded an apology that the missing man refused to make.

Dr. John Murray Atwood, dean of the theological school, declined to explain just what had caused the unpleasantness. He only commented:

Nor would the doctor explain that.

Irwin, described as about five feet eight inches tall, of husky build, and with powerful arms and hands, is not handsome, those who knew him said, but he had "a pleasant and winning smile."

He was earning his expenses at St. Lawrence by teaching sculpture to children of several well-to-do families in Canton. He frequently boasted of his prowess as an amateur boxer in the past and on occasion gave exhibitions to prove it, friends said.

Police have determined that Irwin left Canton on Thursday—three days before the triple-slaying on Beekman Hill was discovered. When he arrived in New York he hired a room in East 50th street, only a short distance from Mrs. Gedeon's suite.

BROKE SUNDAY'S DATE

Irwin gave up the room the next day, Good Friday. But wherever he spent Friday night, he was in the city on Saturday.

The young man, with a Miss Eleanor Sheldon—also a student at St. Lawrence—and with another couple, visited the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the American Museum of Natural History that day.

The four had dinner together about 5:30 Saturday afternoon and then separated. The three friends said that they made a "date to meet Irwin on Sunday, but that, as he was agreeing to it, he showed marked nervousness and talked vaguely.

He did not keep the "date" Easter Sunday. He has not been seen by any of his friends or acquaintances since, as far as police have been able to determine.

But besides Irwin and the "dynamite diary," there were other developments in the case today, both of which complicated the investigation.

One came from a formal statement to police by Attorney Peter L. F. Sabbatino, counsel for the girl's father, Joseph Gedeon.

He told authorities that Mike Creighton, a jailbird released from the Riker's Island penitentiary on Saturday, had come to him with an amazing tale linking Ronnie with the underworld.

HER "BODYGUARD"

According to Attorney Sabbatino, Creighton related the following:

"A gangster in the shakedown racket that I know used to have his brand on this Gedeon girl.

"Girodano hired me to carry the girl around in his car, and my job was to see that she got home every night OK, soused or sober.

"I thought the girl must have helped Frank 'put the shake' on some top-hats from Park avenue, but I didn't really know.

"I figured that he might have wanted her for himself and that he was having her guarded because he was jealous."

Sabbatino said that when Creighton told him his tale, he urged the man to go along with him to police, but that Creighton vanished on that suggestion.

SECRET OPERATION

The other complication came out of a story told police by John Pattantyus of Los Angeles, they said, and it concerned an operation Ronnie had performed about a month ago.

In connection with this story, which came from a man who was a close friend of both the slain girl and her mother, detectives are now seeking an "art patron" and a professional athlete.

Three weeks before the murders, police said, they learned that Mrs. Gedeon had accused the first two men—separately—of being responsible for the condition which preceded the operation.

The first, a married man, is quoted as having told Mrs. Gedeon:

"I wish the whole d—d Gedeon family was in h—!"

The other, a physical training school employe, is said to have "done business" with the surgeon.

SURGEON FACES GRILL

Not only are these two being sought, but the surgeon, whose name was listed in Ronnie's "date book," is now being questioned, detectives disclosed.

So intimate are the thoughts penned in the "dynamite diary," it was quite evident that Ronnie had never expected they would be read by any eyes but her own, authorities admitted. She wrote in the frankest of terms, only when a word was too blunt or too ugly to express her thoughts she substituted dashes, they said.

In a newspaper clipping pasted in the book, the model exhibits a premonition that her wayward heart would lead only to misery. She confesses when she was sixteen to intoxication as if it were not unusual. She reproaches herself for "double-crossing" an admirer. She stresses, with cryptic comment, her desperate effort to marry.

SUPPRESS SOME OF IT

Police suppressed for the present the passages in the diary describing her marriage to Robert Flower. Their honeymoon and the reasons for disillusion and the annulment of the alliance. The revealed excerpts refer to the unfortunate first marriage of her sister, now Mrs. Ethel Knuder, and the suicide of Ethel's first husband.

The fly-leaf of Ronnie's journal described it as "My Five-Year Diary," but she didn't keep it for five years. It ends in 1934, according to authorities.

The book opens with an entry on January 1, 1932, in which 15-year-old Ronnie relates her mad infatuation from "Bobby" as follows:

"Dear Diary—I am crazy about a certain boy named Bobby. Last night he was drunk. He was only three hours late. Do I have to stand for that?"

But in a day those misdeeds were forgiven and in the next entry, infatuation dominates, tempered by misgiving that appears ominous in view of subsequent developments.

PRAISE FOR MOTHER

Next day Ronnie was troubled, although still in love. She longed for her mother, indicating the girl was absent from home and a conference was desired. This is the entry:

"Jan. 3, 1932—Bobby is the most lovable creature. Am I worried. I wonder whether mother will come."

Mrs. Gedeon, whose selfless devotion to the girl has been attested to by many witnesses since mother and daughter died together in the Easter Sunday murder, evidently responded to Ronnie's distress signal, for the next day the girl wrote:

"Jan. 4, 1932—Mother did come. She is the best mother in the world!"

But in the same entry the waywardness of Ronnie's love is manifest, for immediately after the mother allayed the girl's fears—whatever they were—Ronnie confided to her diary the same day:

"Digar called. Went out with a bloke named Fritz. Jean is coming. I hate to double-cross Jean."

Detectives confessed themselves perplexed by the identity of "Digar" and could not guess the reason for his call. "Jean" was conjectured to be Jean Karp, a schoolmate of the model, who often acompanied her on their innocuous adventures in quest of stage careers. Miss Karp is now employed by a New York motion picture company in a clerical capacity.

JEALOUS OF "DOT"

Jealousy elevated its head for the first time in the diary on the day after "Digar's" call, Ronnie's expedition with the "bloke named Fritz" and the double crossing of her friend. The entry states:

"Jan. 5, 1932. Dear Diary. Saw Bobby and he told me about Dot. I am really very jealous. Damn it. I do love him! I cannot see Fritz."

The identity of "Dot" apparently a boy-and-girl friend of Flower's was not indicated anywhere in the diary, detectives conceded. Police officials held back the entry Ronnie wrote on January 6 but the following day's record reveals her again in ecstasy over Bobby with Fritz discarded:

"Jan. 7, 1932—I am not going with Fritz. Bobby wouldn't like it. I saw him and he said:

"'Oh God! I love you!' Am I happy? I ask you? I was never nearer to an — in my life!"

And at that exclamation, detectives withheld the entries for succeeding days until January 19, 1932, when Ronnie wrote this significant passage:

MENTIONS SUICIDE

"I know B loves me now. He came all the way from Corona just to find out about things. Proof enough?

"Louis committeed suicide. Mother and sister going to Bridgeport, Conn.—doesn't affect me in the least."

The second paragraph recorded the end of the first romance of Ronnie's sister, Ethel, whose estranged husband killed himself in his mother's Connecticut home.

After that, the excerpts permitted to be published by police skip almost a year to:

"Jan. 1, 1933—A new year and I'm still crazy about Bobbie."

Maternal instinct was stirring in the schoolgirl's heart next day when she saw a baby after Bobby called on her. The identity of the infant is not indicated but Ronnie was enraptured as the entry proclaims:

"Jan. 2, 1933—Bobby came over. I quit school. Is that nobby? Saw the sweetest baby in the world. Wish we had one of our own. Little hands—little fingers—blonde hair and big blue eyes."

FATHER NOT MENTIONED

Who Frankie and Pete are will be learned, police expect, by questioning Ronnie's sister and father.

Like a cry of anguished soul five days later, Ronnie revealed the poignant fear she felt of marrying her sweetheart. This is the eloquent entry:

"Jan. 9, 1933—Bobby came over. Dear God! Please give me strength enough to break with him before it is too late. I love him so but he was not made for me."

CHILD WIFE HIDES, TALKS WITH MOTHER

"They can have anything I've got to start their married life. I haven't got very much."

Little Geraldine, who was taken direct to the home of a relative in a town south of Boston, after the relative had bailed her yesterday, expressed herself, at the relative's home, as overjoyed because of the reconciliation with her mother.

GERALDINE LONSEOME

"All I hope is that the case comes out all right," said Geraldine, "so that I can live with him. I'm very lonesome. I've been lonesome ever since our arrest, when we were sparatd.

"I'm wondering what he is doing and now he is feeling and what he is thinking of. I didn't want to leave the jail and leave him there, because I wanted to be near him."

Since leaving the jail, Geraldine has written him two notes, both signed "Your loving wife, Geraldine Murphy." In the first she promised to visit the jail this afternoon, but in the second she told him this plan had been dropped, on advice of their mother, but they would have reunion tomorrow morning in court.

She also wrote a note to her mother-in-law, thanking her for the invitation to stay at the Murphy home.

CONFIDENT OF SUCCESS

"I look forward to the future without fear," said Geraldine, with the poise of an adult. "I can cook and I can do housework. I don't think my age will make any difference.

"I've told him when he gets enough money I want to have a home in the country. I think I'll be happy with him. As soon as he gets a job we will leave his mother's house and start housekeeping ourselves."

For part of today, Geraldine played with her cousins in the town south of Boston. She also went shopping with one of her relatives.

These relatives revealed that Mrs. Jordan, in addition to visiting the house last night, had visited the girl in the jail on Saturday night and had talked with her for some time.

PROBATIONARY MARRIAGE

Today, an attorney who said he will represent the young couple in court tomorrow, declared he will ask the judge to place them on a probationary marriage basis. However, Edward Murphy, father of Joseph, revealed that he has retained Attorney J. Russell Havey for the youth.

The first attorney, Wilbur Hollingsworth, said he believes it would be a mistake to separate the couple, now that they are man and wife.

$3500 Watch Theft In Needham Store

Watches strewn along the floor to the front door, indicated that the thieves made a hasty retreat when they heard Patrolman Thomas J. Rooney trying the back door.

Police Chief Arthur Bliss said about 30 watches had been stolen, while silverware and other articles had been removed from the shelves. Chief Bliss said the men were apparently professional jewelry thieves.

Notre Dame, Trinity Grads Make Merry

WHETHER Roxbury Academy of Notre Dame graduates or Trinity College alumnae seized the social laurels of the week-end hasn't been decided . . . Friday evening, both held the social limelight . . . Roxbury with its glamorous candlelight dance at the Somerset and Trinity playing hostess at a intimate supper soiree in the Sheraton Room of the Copley-Plaza.

On Saturday afternoon, Trinity held forth with a tea and entertainment at the Somerset in honor of members' mothers . . . nor can Holy Cross Club of Boston nor Young Voters League of Massachusetts be disregarded in the week-end race for social prominence.

Holy Cross feted its woman's committee at a tea yesterday at the Copley Square Hotel, preparatory to its annual concert and dance slated for May 3 at the Copley-Plaza . . . the political organization held a reception for Hon. and Mrs. James M. Curley at the Brunswick.

Jolly Time

The jolliest time was at the Sheraton Room Friday evening when grads of the Washington college gathered for dining and dancing at the rendezvous for the benefit of the scholarship fund. Mrs. James Malone was the evening's hostess . . . her brown and white print effectively combined with crisp white pique and Maire Mutire her efficient aide . . . wore an exceptionally smart number of India print . . . tiny blue flowers scattered on a background of ecru cotton.

Everybody was on hand . . . Phil Sullivan and Virginia Hayes glimpsed the affair from their table on the sidelines . . . Virginia wearing black chiffon combined with torquoise accessories and Phil tall and stately in a jacketed frock of heavy robbins' egg blue lace. . .

Frothy evening gowns seemed to be the evening's sartorial keynote . . . Grace Genevieve and Mari-Celeste O'Malley . . . both home for the spring holidays from their studies at Manhattanville . . . wore the night's most attractive frocks . . . Layer after layer of white tulle swirled from a white brocade bodice to fashion Gen's gown and a filmy frock of bright red tulle and a tiny bow-knot of velvet was Mari-Celeste's choice.

Glimpsed Cappy Ryan and Bob Maguire who make a very attractive pair . . . both are tall and slim and exceptionally good dancers . . . Cappy chose a tunic frock of white satin and her sister Anne was equally lovely in a picturesque, puffed-sleeve number of lemon taffeta.

Well Represented

The older members of the O'Connell family were there in entirety . . . Mrs. M. L. [illegible] in white satin . . . Mrs. Paul C. Kirk's white sheer sparkled with diamente and Mrs. John C. Downing's sleek blue hammered satin sported a large cluster of vari-colored organdie flowers.

Future brides spending the evening at the popular rendezvous were Eleanor King Donovan, who joins June bridal ranks, and Virginia Manning whose engagement to John Griffin was recently announced. Eleanor wore a floating pastel chiffon trimmed with dubonnet. Virgina was guest at a family party which included her sister, Mrs. Edward Conroy . . . the former Catherine Manning and Mrs. John Cunningham.

Frances Shea . . . a debutante of last season . . . topped her black frock with a long wrap of orange taffeta and Mary Field, president of the chapter, chose a net gown of gray and coral not unlike the frock which Moira O'Connell wore.

Roxbury Grads

Many of Roxbury's alumnae presidents were on hand to relive old days as the supper dance Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Ellis . . . recently returned from a Florida vacation . . . attended the party . . . Mrs. Ellis wearing a colorful print jacket frock and Mrs. William Gaddis . . . another of the alumnae's heads . . . was attractively gowned in gay spring print.

Eleanor Dean Campbell . . . present alumnae head . . . chose a blue brocade . . . its jacket a tiny regal collar of ruching . . . Gertrude Curry . . . who serves the group so ably as its treasurer . . . wore a single orchid with her blue crepe dress.

The affair might well have been a reception to the alumnae's newly-engaged members, Helena Crosby and Aurelia Burke. No one was more amazed than they when the band struck up a chord at supper time and demanded their appearance with their fiancees . . . Helene danced with her affianced, . . . Paul Markey and Aurelia took a bow with John Francis Scully.

Helene chose a dinner frock of bittersweet crepe . . . a narrow belt of gilt kid its only trimming and very similar to the gown which her sister Ellnor had chosen for the alumnae frolic—Ellnor's frock was made of satin . . . clipped with twin ornaments at the neckline.

I'll Marry Tomorrow

By Louise Jerrold

Chapter 36

Queer silence. They walked side by side with Sandy prancing about them, under the filmy glamour of the moon. They seemed wrapped in a new consciousness of each other.

Then he said in his usual friendly manner, "I've some letters to write. Goodnight—I'm forgetting," his manner was matter-of-fact, "you're wanted in the nursery before you turn in."

She assured herself again and again it was a mere gesture of David's. It meant nothing. In the peace of the moonlit night he had quickened.

That was all. He felt toward her like a grateful brother. Nothing deeper on his part.

She had herself in hand again and her face showed her serenity when she crept out of the nursery long after midnight. The baby had at last gone to sleep.

Strangely enough, Paula felt no fatigue. She seemed eagerly alive, ready for the battle ahead. She had a real job in life. Above all, joy in the job.

Quiet but hurried footsteps sounded in the hall. David, cap in hand, smiled at her out of his weary eyes. "Curly all right? Lilian just phoned. I'm going to get her and her friends. Her car stalled on the Seven Mile Road."

Paula woke the next morning, oppressed, uneasy—that talk with her sister—some time in the afternoon. Lilian would probably sleep late because of last night's misadventure.

But she surprised Paula by sauntering into the dining-room for luncheon. In a cream white silk frock with scarlet belt and tie she looked like a little girl.

Paula tried to harden her heart against her, but could not. She had to meet smile with smile.

"Don't I have the darndest luck," the gay voice demanded. "Breaking down at that ungodly hour!" She stopped as if aware the air was charged, then inserting a cigarette in a turquoise holder said frivolously, "Well, trot it out."

Paula did not answer. She was wondering how to begin, how to reach her.

With a wave of her hand and a jingle of bracelets Lilian dismissed the maid and asked pointblank, "You and Day think I'm a rotten sport, don't you?"

"I am," Lilian admitted with a sardonic twist of her lips. "At least from your point of view and his. Well, what's to be done?"

"I don't see why, dear—"

Lilian flashed. "Of course you can't and neither can Day. You're both too old, not old in years of course, but in your thinking. I don't believe either of you was ever young really."

She lit a second cigarette and smoked thoughtfully a moment, flicking the ashes into a china saucer.

"I've a right to be happy and if I can't find hapiness at home, it's perfectly square to go out and get it where I can—decently."

Paula stopped. She saw tragedy in Lilian's eyes, tragedy aging her face.

Lilian sighed impatiently and said under her breath, "Everything—and nothing." She avoided her sister's regard and stared out into the garden.

Paula's head drooped. Everything was nothing without life's supreme gift.

Lillian went on wearily. "I've tried hard—to make myself over—to please you and Day. But no can do. We don't speak the same language."

She studied Paula's face with strange intensity. "I adore your looks," she choked and asked after a pause, "Don't you ever feel you'll curl up and die if you don't have fun?"

"Yes, sometimes I wish I could cut and run. But I've my—"

A Promise

"Your music," Lilian scoffed. "And Day has his business." Unexpectedly she blew into a temper. "I won't stay shut up here like a prisoner—"

"Idiot, who wants you to? Send out cards for a dinner dance or a garden party—"

"I hate home parties. I—we might as well have a show down. I've got to be free or die—" Lilian's voice quivered, but she steadied it.

"Day's a prince, I'm crazy about him—in a certain way. Curly's a darling and you—you're Saint Paul to me—I worship you—but I've got to be doing something all the time—yes, it's escape, I know—I'm trying to run away from myself.

"Russ Darian told me once I've the soul of a butterfly and some day I'll break my wings. Pleasant prophecy but probably true."

She sprang to her feet and stepped to the open French door. Flashed back and stood, both hands on Paula's shoulders.

Culinary TRICKS WITH Citrus FRUITS

FROM THE MONDAY MORNING BROADCAST OF MARTHA LEE OVER STATION WMEX

REMEMBER the day when all the joy in life seemed to hinge on a new dress for the high school party?

Clothes probably never made anyone and we all know beauty is only skin deep, but human nature for a long, long time has been reacting the same old way to what we see.

Every homemaker has a similar selling job to do—she must guide ever so tactfully the appetites for the family members in such a manner that they will get the well balanced food supply they need for good health.

What better place can we get tips on how to dress fresh fruits than from our Florida homemakers, who for years have been doing culinary tricks with their crops of citrus fruits?

Following are some suggestions for attractive grapefruit baskets—so sharpen your knife and prepare to do some cutting up that will delight the family as well as make a real treat for festive guest days.

GRAPEFRUIT CUP

Cut grapefruit in halves. Remove fruit in segments, then scoop out the excess membranes, leaving the shell clean. Flute edge, or cut in notches. One grapefruit makes two cups.

GRAPEFRUIT BASKET SINGLE HANDLE

Cut around the middle of the grapefruit, leaving one-half inch space uncut on opposite sides of the fruit. Then cut down from the top of the fruit, still leaving the half inch uncut. This forms the handle. Remove the two quarters of skin and the meat from under the handle. Loosen the fruit segments and remove, then scrape out the excess membranes. Scallop or notch the edges of the basket. One grapefruit makes one basket.

GRAPEFRUIT BASKET DOUBLE HANDLE

By this clever method, one grapefruit makes two baskets. Remove segments of fruit from halved grapefruit. Cut around the shell one-half inch from the top, leaving one inch uncut on opposite sides of the shell. Raise cut strips as loops and tie together with narrow ribbon or thread to make basket handle. Insert sprig of green leaves, preferably mint, a flower at top of handle as a garnish. Notch or scallop the brim of shell if desired.

CHRYSANTHEMUM CUP

Remove fruit segments from halved grapefruits and scrape out excess membranes. Cut shells in strips one-third inch wide, simulating chrysanthemum petals. Curl each petal a trifle inward. One grapefruit makes two cups of this type.

GRAPEFRUIT ICE

2 cups water
1¼ cups sugar
2 teaspoons gelatine
2 tablespoons cold water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup grapefruit juice
1 egg white, beaten stiff

Boil sugar and water together for five minutes. Soften gelatine in cold water. Add softened gelatine to hot syrup. Cool. Add fruit juices and egg white. Pour into freezing trays and freeze at lowest temperature. After it starts to freeze, stir mixture in tray so that the egg white will become mixed through. Delicious served with fruit cup, as a meat garnish or a dessert. Serves 6 to 8.

Crowned With Daisies

YOU DON'T have to be queen of the May to go crowned in daisies this spring . . . but, young sophisticate though you are, if you wear them you'll be as pretty as anyone that's ever carried the daisy chain.

There's hardly ever been a season when the daisy hasn't been a fashion favorite, from Gibson Girl days through to the Flapper Twenties and now into the Pretty Period. If your print silk frock isn't too liberally sprinkled with daisies it might be a nice note to pick up the theme with this naive off-the-face bonnet which throws a chaplet of daisies around your back hair. It has an open top. A mesh veil wound around the forehead and knotted in back gives the impression of holding down the flighty bit of straw. This particular bonnet, chosen by the Fashion Congress and modeled by Miss Joan Jacoby, was ensembled with a little navy sheer suit, dressing it up to daytime date importance. The hat is under five dollars; for shopping information, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Put Cleopatra's Secret on Your Shelf

Pine-Oil Body Lotion Takes the Place of Bath Soap

By ARLINE GOULD

THERE seems never to have been a more lush season for body beautifiers, and now comes one—a pine-and-olive-oil affair—that does for the body what the finest creams do for the face.

It's a far cry from today's luxurious preparations to that storied age when the Pyramids were young and Egypt's lovely queen practiced the high art of pulchritude.

And yet, we'll wager you don't know that many of today's exquisite bath preparations go for their principal ingredients far back into history.

It's a pretty well established fact that the secret of Cleopatra's magnetic lure was due to pungent soothing oils. That she annointed her body with olive oil before the royal bath, is no myth, either. And in order to render the oil water-soluble she scattered wood ashes in her private pool!

We're not advocating you to follow her example, for while an olive-oil rub might be wonderful for the body, the thought of wood-ashes adhering to the skin is not a pleasant one at all.

It may come as a surprise to you to know that there is a marvellous pine-olive-oil body massage that is actually water-soluble—a sort of liquefying cleansing cream, that takes the place of soap.

You massage it into the body, gently, BEFORE the bath, rinse it off under the shower or in the tub with warm water—no soap, because the oils are soluble—and your skin is left velvety soft and scented.

It gives the body a million-dollar feeling, and as a pore cleanser and skin beautifier, it performs for the entire body what a liquefying cream does for the face.

It even does more than the finest face cream in the world, because it acts as a preventative of pimples and other unwelcome skin blemishes. And as if all this were not enough to endear it to you—it serves as a deodorant, as well.

You have heard of people who have had to learn to eat olives—unquestionably a lot of people will have to learn how to bathe with oil. But let us assure you its worth the time and little extra effort it requires.

It is our prediction that this oil that takes the place of soap will shortly become a sensation. It has the same cleansing properties of soap—and it is not drying to the skin.

To learn the name of this soluble bath lotion that is carefully blended with an oil extracted from pine needles, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Good Manners

GUEST OF HONOR

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—When it is a very informal party, and the guests come straggling in at all hours, does the honor guest rise when introduced to a man or woman?

2—When all the guests do not leave at the same time, does the honor guest rise as each guest bids her good-bye?

CONSTANT READER

1—Since your hostess will rise to receive each guest, as she or he arrives, you also would rise, to receive these introductions. And this is true whether the party is a formal or an informal one . . . and even if the guests do "come straggling in at all hours".

2—The same thing is true here too. Whether or not you happen to be standing near your hostess when a guest comes to say good-bye to you, you would rise. I am sure that, when you get to these parties, you will find that you will rise automatically to greet and to say good-bye to the guests who have been invited to honor you . . . that you will find it awkward not to rise.

Keeping Communication

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

In certain hands the sole problem is to maintain lines of communication.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

South's rebid was on the aggressive side, but perhaps as good a rebid as he could find.

West opened the Jack of spades; declarer won, and immediately began establishment of the diamond suit. West could see no good reason for covering the Jack, in view of dummy's solidity, and East made the excellent play of letting the Jack hold the trick.

East saw the possibility that declarer had started with only two diamonds—the Jack and a small one—and, if that were true, dummy's entire suit might be shut out by the hold up of the Queen. To accept the Queen at the first lead would merely leave declarer with a winning finesse against West's probable King.

With the Jack of diamonds holding the trick, declarer continued with a low diamond, and when West's King appeared it should have been the easiest matter in the world for declarer to have conceded a trick. He certainly should have seen that an entry in dummy outside of the diamond suit itself was highly problematical — the club King could be the only one and that, only if the Ace were "on side."

But with the impulsiveness common to many players who feel that a King is the biggest game they can bag with an Ace, declarer won the second diamond lead with the Ace, and played a third round to clear the suit. After that he could never redeem himself.

East won and shifted to a low heart. A club was now led to the King, but East snatched up this trick and led another low heart. The club suit was still not cleared, and when West gained the lead with his Jack a third round of hearts presented East with two heart tricks which, in addition to the two clubs and one diamond already taken, defeated the contract.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

Eat Wisely! You Can Go Hungry and Still Gain

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

By IDA JEAN KAIN

INTELLIGENT eating beats dieting any day in the week. A balanced diet gives variety, while a novel diet gives you one or two foods until you are "fed up" on them.

The scientifically planned menus will upset all your traditions of dieting. They include foods you would never think of eating while slimming—milk, bread and potatoes. Yet, on these menus you can lose two pounds per week.

*There are certain fundamental foods which must be included daily. The Thousand-Calorie Menu, which follows the Fruit Regime, allots 800 to the protective foods. The foods listed below should form the basis of all diets, reducing, gaining, or normal:

MILK REDUCERS
1 pt. to 1 qt. daily
1 pt. buttermilk or skimmed milk
FRUITS
1 citrus, or tomato juice, plus
1 fresh, canned or dried fruit
VEGETABLES
2 daily, 1 being a green leafy, in addition to potato
SALAD
Fresh vegetable salad
Vinegar or Reducer's Dressing for the overweights

THOUSAND-CALORIE BALANCED MENU

BREAKFAST	CALORIES
Orange Juice, ½ glass	50
Poached egg on toast	150
Coffee, 1 tsp. cream, 1 rounded tsp. sugar	50
	250
LUNCHEON
Toasted lettuce and tomato sandwich	250
Skimmed milk or buttermilk, 1 glass	80
	330
DINNER
Lamb chop, broiled, 1	100
Baked potato	100
Butter, ½ pat	50
Broiled tomato	75
Chopped vegetable salad (vinegar and seasoning)	25
Fruit	50
Glass of skimmed milk	80
	480
TOTAL CALORIES	1060

French Dressing or Mayonnaise for the underweights
BUTTER
1½ Tbsp. daily for the reducers
2 pats per meal for the gainers
EGGS
1 daily
BREADS AND CEREALS
3 slices whole grain bread daily for reducers
Bread at every meal for gainers
Cereal with cream daily for gainers

If you never eat that much food—try it and get slim! You can go hungry and gain weight unless you know your calories.

The effectiveness of these reducing menus lies in the adequate supply of protective foods, and in calorie balance and distribution. Perhaps you have been gaining weight on just one decent meal a day . . . then eat breakfast for a change. The morning meal gives you a lift and the right start for the day. Food is a stimulant, and you need an adequate luncheon to supply energy for the afternoon. Dinner at night should be limited to 700 calories. The ideal reducing plan would be to have dinner at noon, except for the sedentary worker, whose mental efficiency is lessened by a heavy meal.

The most satisfactory reducing diet sustains the highest degree of mental and physical efficiency. The body cannot store vitamins and minerals as it stores calories.

Don't Ignore A Cold

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

FOR several months everyone has been interested in the common cold. Few seem to escape this annoying affliction.

Of course, colds may be had at all seasons of the year. As a rule, they are most frequent in late fall and midwinter.

A recent survey taken in the industrial field developed many interesting facts. Among other things, it proved that more than 50 per cent of time lost from work is caused by colds and their complications.

We cannot afford to laugh at this common ailment.

NOT "SIMPLE" AILMENT

Unfortunately, since it is often considered a "simple" disease, it is improperly cared for or entirely disregarded.

Repeated colds lead to chronic arthritis, neuritis and other forms of inflammation of the muscles, joints and nerves of the body. In addition, they lower the resistance of the body against other diseases.

Although the actual cause of the cold is not known, it is believed to be due to a germ. No doubt you wonder why medical science has not as yet discovered that germ.

In time it will be located, but the germ is so small it cannot be seen with the most powerful microscope yet invented. For the present, the organism is classified as a "filterable virus," so small is will pass through the finest filt.

The offending agent sets up an inflammation in the back of the nose and throat. This may extend into the voice box and windpipe. The sufferer complains of a running nose, sneezing, sore throat, hoarseness and cough. There may be fever and headache. The symptoms may last from three to five days.

Unfortunately, the disease is rapidly spread from one person to another. For this reason it is a trouble of importance to the public health officials. All the authorities advise that one of the most importance things to do to promote speedy recovery is to stay at home during the acute stages.

This will prevent spread of the disease to others, too, and likewise protect the victim from coming in contact with other germs.

Bridal Toasts

HAPPY days—weddings, graduations, celebrations. Keep the fun rolling with a toast that hits the spot.

Here's a tribute to delight the bride and her guests: "To the bride: May she live as many years as she has admirers, and never lose an admirer."

They'll love your toast to the groom: "May the rest of us be as lucky as he."

And don't forget Thomas Moore's:

"To Love! For Heaven and earth adore him,
And gods and mortals bow
before him."

Offer this gracious wish to the graduate if you'd be admired for poise and wit: "May this commencement be merely the beginning of life's major successes."

"Here's a health in homely rhyme
To our oldest classmate, Father
Time;
May our last survivor live to be
As bold and as wise and as tough as he!"

Then fill the lull in the talk with a merry story—the one about the housewife calling the grocer. "I sent my little boy for three pounds of plums and he brought back only two pounds. Did you weigh them accurately?" The grocer answered, "My scales are right, madam. Did you weigh your boy?"

You'll be welcome at every party if you know a few of the many toasts, witty and gracious, and the side-splitting jokes of our 40-page booklet, "Jokes and Toasts for All Occasions."

Send 15c for our booklet, "Jokes and Toasts for All Occasions," to Boston Evening American, Home Institute, 19 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Have Parents the Right To Object If Youth Weds in Haste?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"All the world loves a lover" we are told.

Any doubts as to the truth of this maxim have been dispelled by the number of warnings addressed to this column since this "Girl Meets Boy" series started.

Girls and boys whose marriages have gone on the rocks warn other lovers not to repeat mistakes they have made.

Haste is the great ally of the divorce court. If you're actually in love, an ounce of careful reflection is worth a pound of speed.

One important "don't" is: Don't fly in the faces of wealthy parents who threaten to disinherit a son or a daughter, if they marry without consent.

Sometimes they do disinherit. Here's one instance:

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"My advice to lovers about to elope is 'Don't!'

"I am a girl from a college town and come from a middle-class family. Father lost his business through the depression, and all we had left was a lovely little home.

"To save the home, I quit school and took a job in a department store, which I still hold.

"To help out, we rented one of our rooms to a law-student at college. He and I became interested in each other and fell in love. His parents are socially prominent, have plenty of money, and a lovely home, well kept by several servants.

THEY DISOWNED HIM

"The boy's father visited him occasionally, seemed to like me, and made me several lovely gifts—but these were given to the 'landlady's daughter,' not to one who would so far forget herself as to be interested in his son.

"The Boy had a big allowance, and had only one more year in college before taking his law degree. Well—we were so much in love that we flew in the face of the objections on both sides, bolted off and were married.

"The Boy's family kept their word and disowned him, cutting him off entirely and stopping his allowance. Now we are both working, my husband only a few days a week at a mean job for small pay, and I in the department store.

"We see nothing ahead. My husband is loyal and refuses to give me up. But ——— "I am under observation for tuberculosis, and the long hours in the department store are hard on me. I have wished a thousand times that I had waited for my husband to take his law degree before we were married.

"With that he could have got a better job. We are both desperately unhappy. "ANITA."

Forever is a long day. And disinheriting parents often, more often than not, do a right-about-face. We hope this may happen in the case of Anita and her husband—but this is no time for handing out worthy platitudes to the distracted young lovers.

In this case Boy comes from a wealthy family. If he has any uncles, cousins or friends who can help to get him a better job, here's hoping that no false pride will prevent him from urging them to help.

Married Comrades

By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 268

IF I had not heard the altercation between Mary and Roderick, I should have known that something had happened by a wariness in Mary.

It is an attitude I occasionally meet, and one which I always ignore.

"Where'll we go?" Junior asked practically. "Over there where Noel is sick?"

"No, in the other bedroom here. I have your pajamas and toothbrushes and combs in the kitchen. Aunt Katherine brought them out to me a little while ago. Go and get them now, say goodnight to us, and get to bed right away."

When she finally spoke, however, it was of the question nearest her heart.

"Auntie Madge," she said, "do you think that doctor really believes Noel is all right?"

"I am sure he does, dear," I said, speaking truthfully.

"If he doesn't get pneumonia"—she shuddered at the dread word—"how long do you think it will be before Noel can go back? Not that I want him to go back—goodness knows I'd love to stay up in this heavenly place with him the rest of our natural lives. But if Noel has the right dope, and I think he has, his father is going to be in the daffy house or in his grave if these plans of his don't go through. So I know that the minute Noel realizes what's up, he's going to be simply crazy if he can't get back on time."

"How did he manage to get away to come up here to see you?" I asked.

FATHER CONSENTED

"Just got stubborn for the first time in his life, and told his father he wouldn't stir a step out of the country unless he could say goodby to me first. So finally deah old Phil consented to Noel's flying up here, on condition that he fly right back again. And if the old boy should find out about this accident, oh! oh! Yet Noel ought not to go right back."

"We can tell nothing tonight," I said practically. "Everything depends upon Noel's condition in the morning. If he's all right, I should imagine there wouldn't be more than a day's delay in his going back. Would that matter?"

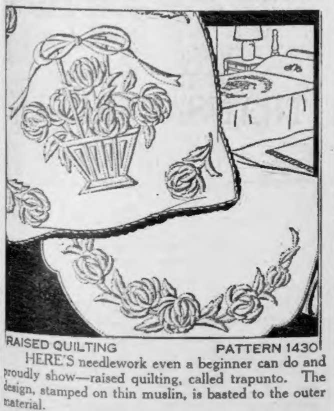
"Quilting" Made Easy



RAISED QUILTING PATTERN 1430

HERE'S needlework even a beginner can do and proudly show—raised quilting, called trapunto. The design, stamped on thin muslin, is basted to the outer material.

Then you do ordinary quilting on the lines of the design. The parts to be raised are padded by pushing ordinary yarn between the two materials.

It's as easy as that! For color variety use different colors of wool. Pillows, scarfs, spreads, and many smaller accessories can be made from this pattern.

Pattern 1430 contains a transfer pattern of a basket 10¼ x 11¾ inches; two motifs 8¼ x 15¼ inches and two and two reverse motifs 3¾ x 3¾ inches; color suggestions; illustrations of all stitches used; detailed quilting directions; material requirements.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to Boston Evening American, Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth avenue, New York, N. Y. Write plainly pattern number, your name and address.

Latest Fashion Flashes From Paris and New York

BLOUSES, unlike oysters, are seasonless, but this spring they will hit a new high in fashion.

Of course the popularity of the cape and jacket is really the impetus behind the present blouse boom. On top of that, however, women will take to them because of their crisp, cool feel—their frilly accents—and their washability.

During April and May the blouse will come in a multitude of styles. There is the peasant kind for wear with pleated linen skirts, the lingerie blouse for bengaline suits, the shirts for summer weight tailleurs, the jacket style blouse for pleated crepe skirts and a host of others.

* * *

TURNING to the formal side of summer life, fashionables in New York, London and Paris are planning their warm weather gowns with an eye on net.

Net evening gowns in every possible color and combination are being romantically featured in rayons. They are made up in soft drapeable materials which silhouette beautifully.

HANEY ON THE MARKET

President's Talk
FAILS TO PUT HALT
To Stock Trading

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, April 5—The stock market last week was highly irregular. First it rose to a point about half way back to the peak of the lull market, measuring from the bottom of the preceding reaction. Then it hesitated as if feeling an approaching blow, and staggered back a point or two when Mr. Roosevelt aired his price fixing ideas on Friday. The week closed, however, with a general recovery.

The complete averages were just about a half a point lower at the end of the week than at the beginning.

The chief interest was centered in the bond market, where a new loss for the slump was registered. The weakness in government issues had a disturbing effect upon sentiment. To some extent this effect may have resulted from thoughts of the possible consequences of a decline in governments as affecting the banks.

For the most part, however, the feeling appears to have been one of dismay that such an administration as the present would allow its credit to be shaken within a few days after one prominent official assured the world that the easy-money policy will continue and that long-term interest rates will remain low, and another prominent official confessed that nobody has enough money to peg the price of his government's paper.

* * *

In interpreting market moves these days one must remember that there is a great deal of "the jitters" abroad in the land. The sell off of Friday is a case in point. Evidently the President is afraid that his inflationary policies are resulting in a runaway boom, so he tries to throw them into reverse by suddenly announcing that certain prices are too high, and that some production is increasing too fast.

Of course, this sort of talk is alarming as indicating a desire for price fixing and production control powers which would be dictatorial. On the other hand, Congress is getting less and less rubbery; and such powers can as yet be secured only by (1) congressional action, and (2) Supreme Court sanction as to constitutionality.

All the President can do as yet is to control the government spending of funds in hand. This power is not going to hurt either steel or copper. In the first place, the government's buying that can be stopped is a minor factor. In the second place, no one in the present administration proposed to reduce total spending; and as long as consumers are to be given funds with which to buy automobiles, refrigerators, houses and similar consumers goods, there will be plenty of inflationary "purchasing power" for steel and copper.

It is more possible to keep inflation earmarked for one kind of "goods," than it was to earmark bank credit for business as against speculation in Hoover's day.

Aside from all this, the President was misinformed and mistaken as to prices and production levels. His statements will not bear analysis.

So, of course, any reaction in stocks based on such talk will not last.

I am inclined to look for nothing worse than irregularity and to expect higher stock market prices.

The big reason lies in the highly inflationary implications of a resort to pump-priming by means of government spending on consumers' goods industries. Aside from that, there are the following points: The most active stocks averaged higher last week, and the percentage of total trading that went to these stocks was large.

It appears as a "secondary" reaction, which has nearly run its course.

Most groups of stocks have now had sizable corrective reaction in the past few months.

I would much rather take my chances in holding industrial stocks that are amply backed by earnings than in holding paper dollars on high grade bonds.

N. Y. WORLD'S FAIR
Hotels Will Be Chief Beneficiaries

New York, April 5—Judging by the results of the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition held in 1933 and 1934, New York city hotels will be the chief beneficiaries of the coming World's Fair, observes the Standard Statistics Company, of New York.

This enterprise is designed to attract 50,000,000 persons to its gates during 1939, and a large attendance is expected in 1940. The International Convention Bureau, composed of 17 European and four other nations, already has allocated the year 1939 to the World's Fair, assuring world-wide participation.

These visitors to New York must be housed, fed and entertained, and the hotels obviously will handle the major portions of this business. Managements already are preparing for the event on a solid foundation. Hostelries are being modernized, gradual efforts are being made to increase rates, and adequate staffs are being trained.

The World's Fair grounds and buildings will entail an investment of $125,000,000, of which $35,000,000 is being contributed by the City of New York and the State of New York. The Fair Corporation plans to spend $30,000,000, while private exhibitors, commercial concerns and foreign governments should account for expenditures of more than $60,000,000. The maximum daily attendance has been set for 800,000 persons, and an average of 250,000 persons is expected daily.

In comparison, the Chicago Exposition cost about $20,000,000, of which $10,000,000 represented investments by private exhibitors and foreign governments. It attracted 25,000 out-of-town visitors per day, and more than 15,000 of whom were accommodated in the principal transient and residential hotels within the city proper. In 1933 the average daily attendance was 137,960 persons, and the total attendance for that season was 26,768,920.

GOVERNMENTS

New York, April 5 (AP—U. S. government issues led the way in a brisk upturn in the bond market today, following overnight announcement of the Federal Reserve Board's new open market policy.

In both treasury and guaranteed groups prices had risen by midday from 6-32 to more than a full point. These gains on top of the recoveries Saturday lifted the market sharply above Friday's lows.

Many low yields corporate loans moved ahead with the federals.

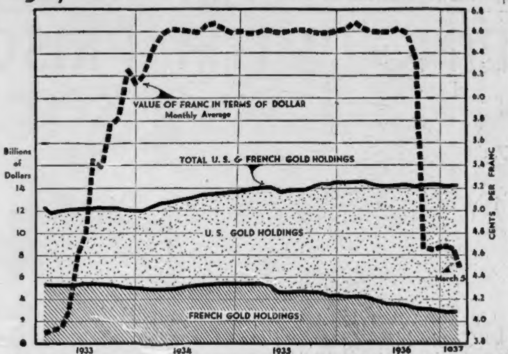
STEEL TRADE WAGES

Highly Erratic Trend of French Franc Shown



The highly-erratic trend of the French franc, as measured in our currency, is shown by this chart. Prior to the Spring of 1933 and back to 1928, the franc was officially valued at slightly less than 4 cents in American money. Throughout the period to 1933, it remained at or near this "parity" level. The process of cheapening the dollar, which began in 1933, naturally raised the valuation of the French currency. It took more dollars, in other words, to buy the same amount of francs.

Semblance of stability in the American dollar during part of 1934 and through 1935 and part of 1936, brought about general "stability" in the French franc, at a level of about 6.6 cents. Ever since the United States left the gold standard, however, France suffered depletion of her supply of gold, while this country constantly gained more and more of the precious metal.

By the beginning of October, 1936, France's gold supply had dropped about 40 per cent from the peak for these holdings, reached in March, 1935. In the same period, the United States had increased its gold supply about 27 per cent. France, therefore, devalued its currency, after a long monetary struggle. The rate thereupon came down to a valuation in American money of slightly more than 4.6 cents.

New York, April 5 (INS)—Both the British pound and the French franc set new highs since last September's devaluation in a quiet money market today.

Three influences chiefly credited by exchange traders for the constant rise in these currencies over the last several weeks are the tourist demands for exchange now taking shape for the summer season, the recent conversion of the Canadian bonds into sterling and the U. S. purchase of Russian gold sent to England in exchange for commodities.

The bond issue indenture called for paying of holders at the rate of $4.86 2-3 and holders are now taking their exchange profit.

The pound rose ⅝ cent to $4.90⅝ and the French franc ⅝ point to 4.61⅛ cents. The belga was up ¼ to 16.85¾, the Swiss franc 1 to 22.81¾ and the guilder 1½ to 54.77 1-3. Scandinavian and Japanese currencies were also higher.

NOW OVER ONE BILLION

Total payrolls of steel companies are now at the rate of over $1,055,000,000 a year, the highest level in the history of the industry, according to the American Iron and Steel Institute.

This new record rate was reached as a result of the increase of approximately $130,000,000 which became effective March 15.

Costs of manufacturing steel have been increased an additional $85,000,000 a year through the recent rise in price of such raw materials as steel scrap, iron ore, tin and zinc.

The rise in labor and material costs, amounting in all to an estimated $215,000,000, on the basis of the amount of finished steel shipped last year, exceeds by almost $15,000,000 the estimate increase in annual gross revenue of $200,000,000 expected to result from the recent advances in steel prices.

Average hourly earnings of the industry's wage-earning employes, currently at 83½ cents per hour, are also at the highest figure on record. The minimum wake in the Pittsburgh and Chicago steel districts is 62½ cents per hour, or $5 per day of eight hours.

$205,000,000 ADDED

Two general pay increases within five months, the first on November 16, 1936, and the second taking effect on March 16 of this year, added $205,000,000 a year to the payrolls of the industry and raised the average hourly earnings of steel wage earners almost 26 per cent.

The November increase, which lifted annual payrolls about $75,000,000, raised the average wage approximately 10 per cent to about 73 cents an hour. Before that increase hourly earnings averaged about 66 cents per hour.

The second increase raised hourly wages about 10 cents per hour, involving about $130,000,000 annually and represented a minimum of 19 per cent increase for employes in the lower wage brackets.

The increase to all wage earners averaged about 15 per cent. In addition, beginning March 16, time-and-a-half is being paid generally for overtime work beyond eight hours per day or forty hours per week.

28 PER CENT ABOVE 1929

Average hourly earnings of wage earners under the new rates exceed the 1929 average of 65.4 cents per hour by 28 per cent. Before the recent wage increase the previous peak of hourly earnings of steel workers was in 1920, when the average was about 74 cents per hour.

Current earnings exceed that 1920 peak by almost 18 per cent. For a period of years the average number of hours worked weekly by wage earners has been decreasing. In 1936, when the tonnage of steel produced was the third greatest in the history of the industry, wage-earning employes worked an average of only 39.8 hours per week.

FIRST QUARTER ADVANCE

Strong Impulse Toward EXPANSION COUNTERACTS
Offsetting Influences

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

New York, April 5—The essential nature of the economic record for the first quarter of the year is that the strong impulse toward expansion counteracted offsetting influences such as strikes, political fears, and acts of providence, such as floods.

The net result of the first three months of business was a moderate increase in total economic activity compared with the final quarter of last year, though the level attained in the December peak was not maintained through the first quarter of 1937. When comparison is made with the first quarter a year ago, the improvement is more substantial.

The actual figures must be corrected to give weight to the interruption to production resulting from strikes and floods. It will be recalled that automobile production was drastically reduced in January and in the first fortnight in February as a result of the sit-downs in the General Motors Corporation.

After the spurt following the adjustment of the General Motors strike, output was again curtailed in the last three weeks of strikes in Chrysler, Hudson and Reo plants.

STEEL SKYROCKETS

The robustness of the recovery urge was especially revealed in the skyrocketing of steel activities. After a quiescent January, the industry has been steadily reporting expanding operations. Recently the industry has been operating at a higher percentage of theoretical capacity than at any time since August, 1929.

In tonnage, recent weekly production has been greater than recorded previously except during the single month of May 1929. It was to this spectacle that the White House addressed its attention toward the close of the week when it was revealed that the Federal government tended to switch the main force of its expenditures to the consumer goods industries.

Some wonder why, in view of the changing economic situation, the federal government does not sharply taper off total emergency expenditures, thus contributing in action, as well as in words, to efforts to calm down the boom.

As a matter of fact, even before the White House statement, public engineering and construction awards in first quarter were 39.9 per cent below the corresponding months of last year, while private awards increased by 82.5 per cent.

In the reduction of public awards, state and municipal contracts fell off 40.4 per cent and Federal contracts 29.3 per cent as compared with the same weeks a year ago.

This record indicates that President Roosevelt's statement of Friday in respect to reduced Federal expenditures for heavy goods was in part a reference to an accomplished fact.

COMMODITY LEVELS

Official cognizance of changes in the business situation was doubtless occasioned by the recent run-up in groups of commodity prices, especially by the metal group, which rose 11 per cent during the first quarter. Prices of farm products, it should be noted, climbed even more.

In brief, commodity prices rose spectacularly from the second week in November to mid-January, and then held their own until the second week of March, when they started to move upward again.

War preparations overseas were commonly mentioned as a price raising influence. Irrespective of this, it should be observed that in the foreign trade of the United States, imports continued to grow at a substantially higher rate than exports, accentuating the new trend toward an unfavorable balance of trade.

In securities, the most significant development has been the continued weakness in high grade bonds, which evidently reflect a growing disposition to question whether subnormal interest rates can long be expected to continue amidst expanding economic activities. Already Treasury bills and notes, bankers' acceptances and commercial paper have made initial adjustments to a higher interest rate.

CONTRADICTORY MOVEMENTS

Stocks made contradictory movements in the first quarter. Until the first week in March industrial issues moved to new high ground for the recovery, then there was a sharp break for a fortnight, followed by a rally. New evidences of official dislike of boom tendencies were accompanied by a break in stock prices, which again firmed up in the closing sessions of the week.

Money managers at Washington have for some time been attempting to talk down a boom. When they fit their action to their words and stop deficit financing, discontinue artificially low money rates and begin reducing the national debt, then their influence will be heightened.

Reserve to Buy Governments in Open Market

Washington, April 5 (INS)—The Federal Reserve Board joined with the treasury today in an emergency move to halt tumbling government bond prices and to maintain an abundant supply of basic credit for industrial expansion.

The boards' open market committee announced it would engage in a heavy buying program to steady the government bond market. The committee agreed the two major causes for the current heavy selling of government obligations are: 1—The fear prevailing in financial circles that "easy" money conditions shortly will terminate, and 2—The desire to obtain additional cash to meet the increase in reserve requirements which becomes effective May 1.

By increasing reserve requirements—raising the amount banks must hold as reserve against their deposits—the board on May 1, will have reduced surplus funds in bank vaults to $500,000,000. At present, these excess reserves total $1,400,000,000.

25 Years Ago

$809,000,000 new capital issues offered in first three months of 1912.

SIDELIGHTS OF WALL STREET

New York, April 5—Grocery chains during the first two months of this year show even greater progress in dollar sales than during 1936. The aggregate gain in sales was 13⅛ per cent above the first two months of 1936, while for all of 1936 the rise over preceding year was 9½ per cent, according to Poor's. The study concluded that profit margins should remain favorable because "improved consumer purchasing power should result not only in increasing sales, but also permit chains to effect the price advances necessary to offset rising wholesale costs." Regarding the Robinson-Patman Act, the analysis pointed out that the strong chains, with their large resources, "remain in a favorable position to minimize the act's effects."

Power Equipment Prospects Viewed

Outlook for electrical equipment is "exceptionally promising," a study by Munds, Winslow & Potter says. It bases its conclusions o several factors, among which were: electricity production of record proportions for 1936 plus the fact that the weely output this year has consistently maintained its rate of gain over last year's figures; construction expenditures of public utility companies this year will exceed 700 million dollars and will be the largest since 1930; demand for electric appliances has been bolstered by the higher rate of wages and employment.

'Free Riders' Ousted To Bring Success

Successful distribution of a new bond issue in face of recent markets is something brokers marvel at, for since January the experience has been that most new offerings have been "sticky." This means that a good part of an issue remains in the hands of underwriters and dealers—who have not entered business to become investment trusts, but who have rather engaged in the business of persuading investors to purchase. Last week's successful offering was Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line 4s, sold at 97½ to yield 4.22 per cent. That yield attracted buying by insurance companies to the extent of more than half the issue. But one of the prime reasons for success, according to good authority, was that the underwriters took subscriptions from dealers only to the extent of bona fide bids. In other words, the syndicate eliminated the "free riders" whose aim is to get in at the offering price and out at a small profit while distribution is underway.

Heating Oil Prices Rise Unseasonally

Unseasonal advances of one-half cent a gallon in New York and New England and of one-quarter cent in New Jersey in heating oil delivered in tank wagons which were made are ascribed to the cold weather last month. Temperatures in January and February were higher than usual, but dropped below their usual levels last month, stimulating the demands for the fuel. By a similar process of reasoning some observers expect that prices will be reduced in the near future if the weather has a normal degree of seasonal warmth. Many consumers of heating oil are protected by contracts for definite periods which specify that the price shall not exceed a certain amount during the life of the contract, thus limiting the number affected by the current advances. Anthracite mining companies announced that their prices would be advanced on May 1 owing to the initiation of the seven-hour day and the higher production costs resulting from it. Thus these two competitive fuels are advancing unseasonably at about the same time and for different reasons.

Southern Pacific Freight Up 17 P. C.

Traffic over Southern Pacific lines currently is running approximately 17 per cent above last year, the same rate of increase as was shown in March. On a cumulative basis, Southern Pacific freight thus far this year is running almost 21 per cent above last year. Shippers in the Southwest territory expect freight loadings in that region to be around 5.9 per cent higher in the present quarter than in the like period of 1936, and Southern Pacific is expected to share substantially in this local freight rise. The road's operating revenues in the first two 1937 months totaled $36,612,361, against $27,211,407 in the like 1936 period. For the year 1936, Southern Pacific had net earnings of $3.84 a common share, against 63 cents in 1935.

Russian Gold Bars Get High Rating

Refutation is made in authoritative quarters here of statements emanating from London that the Russian gold bars recently purchased for American account in London are of inferior quality. The contrary is true, it is asserted, since the Russian bars of gold are in point of fineness superior to any other gold received from abroad. The Russian bars receive a nearly perfect rating. Stories had originated in London that the Russian bars had not been sold in the open market there because they were of poor quality and thus unacceptable. A substantial part of the nearly $60,000,000 gold reported engaged in London since mid-March is understood to be comprised of Russian bars, although no figures are obtainable as to the exact proportion.

RESERVE ACTS

Relief FOR MARKETS Is Seen

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The announced plan of the Federal Reserve System to buy governments in the open market is a public declaration of policy which is aimed at continuance of present conditions in the money market.

Behind the declaration there is undoubtedly a determination to relieve tension in the money market's while providing a brake on rising bond yields and [illegible] term rates.

[illegible] significant [illegible] supply of [illegible] money rates [illegible] fair to assume that [illegible] in the [illegible] market will be stemmed and [illegible] which [illegible] investment in [illegible] short term market.

[illegible] significant that the Federal Reserve move comes at a time [illegible] industrial [illegible] and high-grade bonds are [illegible] turning [illegible] on [illegible] representative averages. Last [illegible] we expressed our conviction [illegible] a much [illegible] after we [illegible] the opinion of [illegible] observers. At the same time the better [illegible] was [illegible]. The point of this review is [illegible] such developments preceded [illegible] action. And instead of [illegible] for a stemming of the [illegible] the sequence of events [illegible] to be one somewhat [illegible] nature [illegible] for at this [illegible].

Notebook: Air conditioning sales are currently reported as running more than 100 per cent above 1936 levels thus far this year . . . Which is more than conservative. Because the dollar value of contracts for January-February — the only complete figures available—rose over the same months last year by 165 per cent . . . And March figures are expected to be good . . . When you stop to consider that it takes 240 acres of pulpwood to get out the Sunday editions of the average big city newspaper you have the answer to the bullishness on paper stocks when newsprint prices are rising.

The stock market from Saturday through to the time this is being written has had a better rise than many observers anticipated, [illegible] no doubt, to the more conciliatory tone of dispatches from [illegible] zones accompanied by a [illegible] of the shorts who waited [illegible] days weakness to establish [illegible]. Boardroom Briefs: Those who have any doubts regarding statements to the effect that the aviation industry is still in its era of expansion may put them at rest . . . Dollar value of commercial aircraft deliveries in January showed an expansion of 262 percent over the same 1936 month . . . This is probably a larger percentage gain than will result for the full year but even then we expect a percentage gain of close to 75 per cent in the value of total commercial and military aircraft production . . . Which is sufficient reason to maintain a constructive attitude toward the aviation group, as we see it.

Federal loans pushed up briskly in the bond department and corporation issues improved substantially. Commodities were mixed.

At Chicago cash corn jumped to $1.40 a bushel for the first time in 17 years and corn futures were up the limit of 4 cents a bushel at one time to new 12-year mark. Export copper was lower, along with rubber futures.

The New York imported bar silver price was lifted 1 1-8 cents an ounce to 46⅝ cents, a new top since last November, following an upturn of the metal in London.

Current Topics

Interest was shown in the survey of the magazine "Steel" which found slackening demand for steel in the automobile field due to labor interruptions was more than taken up by heavy requirements in other lines.

In general, it was said, mills have sold practically all their output for second quarter, with third quarter business being booked only at prices which may prevail when shipments are made.

The survey revealed pig iron tonnage going abroad in January and February was greater than the combined pig iron exports for six years from 1931 to 1936.

Foreign Buying Of Securities Here Up

Washington, April 5 (INS)—Foreigners last year purchased more than $3,580,000,000 worth of securities in the United States.

Treasury statistics revealed today this buying volume was nearly double that of 1935, when foreigners bought U. S. stocks and bonds valued at $1,963,000,000.

During the past two years alien investors disposed $4,310,000,000 of their securities purchases, retaining $1,233,000,000 and bringing foreign investments in the United States close to $8,000,000,000. Virtually every country was more active in the American stock and bond market last year than in 1935.

New Haven Loadings Up

New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co.'s report of 10,230 freight cars loaded at 14 Connecticut points on the company system, compared with 7896 in March, 1936, an increase of 29.5 per cent, reflects the increase in business activity now being enjoyed.

In the first quarter this year carloadings have amounted to 32,404 and compared with 27,352 in the corresponding period of 1936, reveals an increase of 18.4 per cent.

IMPLIES U. S. Price FIXING

BOOM CONTROL STUDIED

By BROADAN WALL
Universal Service

New York, April 5—Implications of arbitrary price fixing contained in the unexpected presidential criticism of boom price tendencies in basic materials subjected the speculative markets to a real test last week.

The remarks of the nation's chief executive that the government would seek to shift recovery and relief expenditures from the durable goods to consumers goods in an effort to halt climbing prices marked the first official cognizance of the inherent dangers in the situation.

The shock administered to the markets by this incident might prove a more effective brake on speculative tendencies than even the administration desires.

The suggestion that the durable goods ought to be slowed down because they are outrunning consumption goods if a disaster is to be averted represents the reverse of the aims behind the whole artificial pump priming through huge governmental expenditures early in the depression.

But there is the danger that the new thought might well prove a boomerang to the inflation process instead of a curb or effective control.

If the government continues to spend money for relief and recovery, as is pre-supposed by the President's proposals, this money will find its way into trade channels and help to support high prices. Moreover, it must be fully recognized that many basic commodities are governed by world market conditions and not by domestic supply and demand.

Yet it is altogether true that the improvement in durable goods industry has recently been more rapid than in consumer goods. Statistics covering a period as late as last January showed the government's index of employment in heavy industries advanced 15 per cent over year previous compared with an advance of only 8 per cent in consumer goods trades.

The explanation for this is obviously that the durable goods industries were much more violently depressed than the consumer goods industries and therefore had to rise more to reach normal. But even though this presupposes basic products industries have out-distanced the rise in the other line available statistics tell a reverse story.

At the close of February, for example, the Department of Labor found employment in the durable goods industries still only 93.2 per cent of the average for the three years from 1923 to 1925 while employment in the consumer goods industries was 105.1 per cent of that level.

From these contracts it would seem that the durable goods industries as a whole are still far from a boom. Assuredly, there has been no such expansion in the railroad equipment industry. Nor is there anything approaching a similar condition in heavy building construction.

Even Wall Street in its speculative enthusiasm readily admits that an unbalanced condition exists in different lines and that such a gap cannot continue indefinitely.

Steel operations for example have been running at or close to capacity. Deliveries are delayed, and the pace is so fast that slowing down is sooner or later inevitable. The steel companies, at any rate are sold up so far ahead that governmental orders at this time would be meaningless and deliveries necessarily limited to late 1937 or early 1938.

On the score of prices, it is also apparent from available records that while the price of steel has risen 25 per cent, agricultural products have climbed even more the past year. Wheat has advanced almost 50 per cent in this period; corn almost 100 per cent; cotton 30 per cent, hides 50 per cent and some others equally as startling.

It does appear rather futile on the face of these changes to attempt to talk down higher steel and copper prices and to remain significantly silent on price increases in other directions.

The proposal to shift spending into projects intended to increase the demand for consumer goods can only be assumed to mean that home relief is to be continued at his present high level and perhaps even increased. This policy is far from anti-inflationary and in fact toward the end of the week received due recognition in easing the earlier nervousness induced by the first shock of the change in policy.

Altogether it is infinitely too early to appraise accurately the long range effects on the nation's heavy industries and on the general recovery of the government's attitude with regards to the price structure. Actually orders on the books of the heavy industry manufacturers are in such volume as to permit a continuation of production at high levels for some time to come without government business.

B. C. FORBES:

Surprises UNSETTLE Business

By B. C. FORBES

Washington continues to inject surprises into business. The effect in almost every instance is unsettling.

President Roosevelt declared on Friday that durable goods industries have outrun consumers goods industries in recovery, and that the administration will switch its spending accordingly.

Where the President obtained his information is a mystery. Whichever official furnished it should be promptly dropped.

The facts are that goods going into immediate consumption have done better all through the depression than more lasting products. This condition still exists.

Mr. Roosevelt expressed uneasiness over rising prices in certain industries. He refrained from mentioning the spectacular advances in various basic farm products—wheat, corn, beef, hides, cotton all soared last week to new heights for the year and to the highest figures for recent years in most cases. Nor did he explain why this somersault in the administration attitude toward prices — the fact being, of course, that its long-avowed policy was to stimulate a return to the 1925 general price level.

18 Per Cent Short

This object has not been nearly attained—it is some 18 per cent short.

The immediate effect of the President's pronouncement was a sharp fall in security values, particularly in steel and copper stocks.

* * *

If the nation's head had announced that the time had come to curtail costly construction and other public operations and that other economies would be instituted in a determined effort to bring the nation's finances into balance, the national response would have been most favorable.

Such a declaration would have been peculiarly timely because of the sinking of government securities to new low levels and the jettisoning of government obligations by banks.

But the note struck was critical of industries rather than constructive, disturbing to sentiment rather than reassuring.

* * *

The ABC of recent price developments is that the law of supply and demand has been operating, as it always and inexorably operates finally.

Speculation

Speculation unquestionably has played a part in the advance in copper prices, especially foreign speculation incited by the scramble by different nations for war materials. Similar speculation has been active in other non-ferrous metals, in rubber and probably in wheat and cotton.

But more fundamental [illegible] have been at work as they always are after a period of prolonged under-buying. The National City Bank of New York aptly explains:

"Much of the rise that took place in the cost of doing business last year, due to the granting of wage increases, to higher prices paid for raw materials and to higher taxes, was not passed on to the public in the form of higher prices for finished goods, but was absorbed by industry through the expansion of sales volume and the consequent lowering of unit costs. Whether or not the further rise in costs this year, due to labor troubles, changes in wages and hours, advances in commodity prices, social security tax, etc., can be absorbed by industry or passed on to the public in higher prices without checking consumption is one of the most important question marks against 1937."

Good and Bad

The latest labor news is a picture of the good and the bad. This column recently forecast an amicable settlement of the negotiations between soft coal mine owners and miners' representatives. It was then said that John L. Lewis had enough other battles on his hands to keep him busy and that a coal strike was not foreshadowed. A new agreement was reached, as anticipated. In a nutshell, it embodies an increase in wages entailing the burden of an additional 25c a ton on coal price to consumers. As it was, the consumer finally becomes the bearer of the burden of higher [illegible].

The bad labor news has included recurrences of sit-down strikes in several General Motors plants, in violation of the recently achieved agreement. Apprehension has been engineered that Lewis and his assistants have started a fire which they may not prove able to control.

* * *

Readers of this column have been told repeatedly that caution has been rife for some time in the highest circles. The recession in securities, therefore, should occasion no astonishment.

This cautionary attitude has not been abandoned.

Spending by the masses has not slackened.

LAKE IN IRELAND READY TO TELL OF COUNTRY

Following a seven days' voyage crossing the Atlantic, Austen Lake, columnist for the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, was today starting off on his tour of Ireland which he will describe in his own inimitable manner for the readers of these two papers.

Lake sailed from Boston [illegible] week ago [illegible] steamer [illegible] arriving in [illegible] yesterday. The [illegible] will [illegible] the Emerald Isle meet [illegible] and [illegible] political and business leaders.

The Boston Evening American writer will go direct to Dublin where he will visit the Dail in session in the Irish capital. He has an appointment with the nation's chief, Eamon de Valera, to hear from his lips how self-sustaining the new Ireland is and what the future will bring.

TOUR A TREAT

Following the Dublin visit Lake will [illegible] down the east coast to Wicklow and the Curragh, past the center of the horse heaven. He will then move south by slow stages to Cahir, thence to Tipperary, stopping in thatched cottages, a tavern or wherever may be available when nightfall overtakes him.

Commenting on Austen Lake's trip through Ireland, Charles J. O'Malley, well known advertising specialist and journalist, who owns a castle in Parknasilla, termed it a treat to every Bostonian, especially those of Irish birth.

"I was delighted to learn of Austen Lake's trip through Ireland. He is one of the foremost writers in the country.

"I've always noticed that little attention has been given Irish atmosphere, hospitality and home life.

"Only recently I returned from Ireland from a visit to my home there and this trip impressed me more than any other visit. As you know, this is the loveliest season in Ireland, and its description from the pen of an experienced wanderer will be a treat to every Bostonian and person of Irish birth.

"The Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser are to be congratulated on sending Mr. Lake to Erin, and we all anxiously await the first of his articles."

DOG RACING O.K. BY SALISBURY SELECTMEN

Permit of the Essex County Greyhound Association to conduct dog racing at Salisbury Beach has been approved by the Salisbury board of selectmen, the Boston Evening American learned today.

This same association recently abandoned its plan to build a track at Methuen after the State Racing Commission ruled that not more than one track can be operated within 25 miles of another at the same time.

The proposed Methuen track was said to be about 22 miles from Wonderland Park, Revere. The dog track to be erected on Beach road, Salisbury Beach, is 33 miles from the Revere track, "as the crow flies."

REPORT CONFIRMED

Police Chief Harold F. Condon of Salisbury, who is also chairman of the board of selectmen, confirmed the report today and stated:

"We welcome the dog track to Salisbury Beach because we feel that it will be an asset. We are certain it will stimulate business here and will also attract a great deal of business to Salisbury Beach."

Philip Philbin, nominated for lieutenant governor in the Democratic pre-primary convention, and counsel for the Essex County Racing group, was scheduled to appear before the State Racing Commission this afternoon to ask for 60 days of racing to be split during the early Summer and Fall.

The site of the proposed track is an open field and work has already been started to clean the land of rocks and shrubs.

Other Salisbury selectmen approving the permit were Joseph Dailey and Alfred French.

Beverly, April 5.—Robert Stickles, 26, Portsmouth, N. H., taxi driver, was recovering from a bullet wound in his thigh in Beverly Hospital today while police were looking for five men who held him up, shot him, abducted him in his own taxi to Somerville, then abandoned him.

NEW NEWS GAME AT TOY FAIR

New York, April 5 (INS).—One of the latest creations for young and old alike was exhibited at a toy and game fair which opened here today.

The new game, "Flash!—News," invented by Amster Spiro, city editor of the New York Evening Journal, makes every player his own city editor. As many as six may play the game at one time. The object is to produce the best front page and win the greatest circulation.

Before each player as the game starts is a dummy front page which is filled as the game progresses with cut-outs of printed news matter and pictures. The news is supplied in separate envelopes of [illegible] sorts of [illegible] nature.

With a turn of the dice, player reaches for his choice of news items from numbered cards according to the throw of the dice. The game continues until each player has gone to press with an eight column front page.

A player may finish a quickly assembled page and put it to press for a special bonus in circulation or he may be forced by a streak of ill luck of the dice to hit the streets with an extra.

When all papers are on the street the game's banker compiles the circulation value of each sheet from a score card which fixes the value of each front page item and the editor with the greatest circulation reaps his reward.

GUARD Broadway CUTIES

INVESTIGATE APPLICANTS

By ANN MARSTERS

There probably comes a time in the life of every young man when he thinks, wistfully, of how wonderfully glamorous it would be to have a date with a Broadway showgirl.

In many cases that's as far as it goes, because in the first place, he doesn't know any showgirls and in the second place, he doesn't know how to go about getting introduced to them.

But now at last there is actually a "Broadway Date Bureau" to take care of these wistful cases.

Dates are arranged very nicely and properly—and only nice proper men need apply.

We might as well tell you that a goodly number of boys from Harvard, Princeton and Yale have taken advantage of the bureau. Several Harvard boys, for instance, spotted the application blank in a New York paper—and they filled it out in plenty of time for the Easter holidays. (I should know because I saw the applications.)

Establish Bureau

Well, it all came about like this.

It seems that Broadway is full of beautiful young girls this season, girls whose ages range from 16 to 20. The cafes and musical revues are demanding youth and freshness, and many of the girls have never before been on Broadway. They are unsophisticated and innocent in the ways of show business.

So the older girls—the girls who are still young, but who have been on Broadway for a few seasons—decided to think up a way of protecting the "Baby Chorines."

The result was the "Broadway Date Bureau."

It is made up of a committee of girls from each New York cabaret and musical show. There are three girls in every committee, and it is their duty to make the regulations and see to it that the rules are enforced. Each committee has a chairman to whom the applications are sent.

The girls spent quite a lot of time and thought in making up the application blanks, a sample of which is printed on this page. And they also thought up the following rules and explanations:

1—If you want to meet a girl in one of the shows, you must first fill out an application blank.

2—The application is carefully considered by the committee.

3—An outside investigation (believe it or not) is made of you.

4—If you pass, you are formally introduced to the young girl of your fancy.

5—Until the committee feels that the baby chorine is able to take care of herself, an older girl goes along as chaperone.

New World

You might wonder why the young girls don't go out with men whom they already know and trust. But the point is, that most of the baby chorines have no boy friends in New York.

They have stepped into a strange new world—far away from their hometowns where they used to go dancing and to the movies with boys of their own age. But they still haven't lost the desire to meet nice young men. And of course nice young men like to meet beautiful girls.

One of these baby chorines is a local girl named Ruth Reed. She comes from Somerville and was trained for the stage at Mae Corbett's dance studio. Now she is at the Paradise cafe and it's her first appearance on Broadway.

Ruth, who is tall and blond and beautiful, thinks that the date bureau is a marvelous idea.

"I've read some of the applications," she said, "and they seem to come from a very nice type of boys and men. The questions really give us a good idea of what they're like. And of course, we'll go out only with the very nicest ones."

The applications remain confidential—so I can't tell you very much about the ones I saw. Anyway, it's all right for you to know that some of the Harvard boys were pretty facetious in filling out the blank.

One young man, for instance, stated that he was "miseducated at Harvard," and, instead of answering "yes" to various questions, he persisted in writing "indeed." When it came to spending money on girl friends, he wrote "the sky's the limit."

Others took the questionnaire very seriously. The students, it appears, are willing to spend from five to fifteen dollars on an evening's entertainment.

Marie Carroll, of the Paradise Cafe, who is chairman of the committee, is in hopes of doing some match-making through the bureau.

"It would be nice," she said, "if some of the girls could fall in love and marry. After all, almost any girl would prefer a husband who would love her and take care of her to spending her youth dancing on Broadway."

Marie herself is very sweet and very lovely to look at. The two members of her committee are Kay Cameron and Judy Malcolm.

At the French Casino pretty Dorothy Delford is in charge. The Hollywood is represented by Janet Waldon, Peggy Page and Irma Bundel. Frances Stewart is the chairman at "Red, Hot and Blue." And at "The Show Is On" it's Jane Lane, Ruth Greeley and Helen Ecklund.

Those are the girls to whom applications should be sent—in case you'd like to know.

State Budget Fight

Bigelow Attacks 70 Million Bill

Lashing out at mounting federal grants, Albert F. Bigelow, chairman of the House ways and means committee, today presented for debate in the House the state 1937 budget bill, calling for expenditures of $70,061,707.58, a reduction of $227,251.67 from Governor Hurley's recommendations.

Bigelow declared that "these grants will probably increase and the preservation of home rule of the Commonwealth will become even more serious."

The sum of $1,161,062.49 it was revealed has been reserved for supplementary appropriations.

To establish a state tax of $10,200,000 Governor Hurley, it was pointed out, plans to meet a deficit of $20,708,510.19 in expenditures over revenue, by continuing the surtax on income, corporation and inheritance taxes totaling $3,000,000, and a $7,600,000 transfer from receipts from the gasoline tax and motor vehicle receipts.

HINTS "CAMOUFLAGING"

Criticising this "camouflaging" of the true deficit, as reflected in the arbitrary fixing of the state tax, Bigelow warned that these diversions of revenue have aroused the motorists and that they are working to take the matter to the voters in order to put a stop to the practice.

Enlarging on the increasing threat to home rule through Federal grants, Bigelow condemned the practice of the Federal government matching local communities and the state in the expenditure of money for projects.

"With few exceptions," he pointed out, "these Federal grants impose conditions which increase the expenditures of the state and its cities and towns far beyond what they would otherwise deem necessary.

"When governments are spending more than their tax incomes they have to borrow, which is collecting taxes on the installment plan. If budgets are not balanced and borrowing continues the foundations are being laid for inflation and then the wage earners' dollar buys less and less as prices rise.

LEADS TO RUIN

"Government spending orgies lead to great suffering and ruin. For the wage earner the solution of his problem is plain—tell your public officials in no uncertain language that you will not longer support them if they keep on increasing your tax burden."

He said it is now estimated that taxes takes 20 per cent of the national income and he cited figures to show that food costs have risen 45 per cent over 1933 prices.

"The wage earner may never get a tax bill but he pays as a consumer," he declared.

Since 1931, maintenance appropriation for the state, he instanced, has risen $9,000,000 of which $8,000,000 went for care of the increased number of inmates in state institutions and increased welfare reimbursements to cities and towns.

CITES WELFARE COSTS

"Although the state population has increased only 3 per cent, the number of patients in mental disease institutions has risen 16 per cent, while the number of state employes, due largely to the 48-hour law, has jumped 35 per cent," he added.

"One half of the $8,000,000 increase in maintenance costs was caused by increased welfare disbursements to cities and towns, an increase of 167 per cent.

"With new social service legislation and a yearly increase in the number of inmates which require new buildings and additional employes, it is difficult to see how there can be any substantial curtailment of maintenance costs and reimbursements."

Some of the controversial items reduced by the committee from the budget as recommended by the Governor which are before the House for approval are:

Reduction from 30 to 25 in the force of inspectors under the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission.

SUGGESTS REDUCTIONS

Reduction of $54,425 for the tax appeal board which will keep it running to June only, future of the board to be determined later. This is the board to which three former members of the Governor's Council were appointed by former Governor Curley. They are William G. Hennessey of Lynn, James J. Brennan of Somerville, and Morton Burdick of Springfield.

Reduction of temporary examiner on duty in the insurance department.

The budget contains an increase of $85,000 for miscellaneous improvements in sanitation and upkeep and for further fire protection at the Boston State Hospital.

Bresnahan Jokes (Maybe) About His New Police Job

Police Detective John Bresnahan reappeared today.

But instead of setting at rest rumors that have gone racing through police headquarters since he was reported missing last week, Bresnahan started the ball rolling again.

True, he was speaking in a humorous vein, and with a twinkle in his eye, but the humor rubbed off leaving only the words, as his remarks circulated in the dark corridors at 154 Berkeley street, which is police headquarters.

"Well, I'm going to be either deputy superintendent of the Boston police department or a sergeant in the state police," said Detective Bresnahan.

WINKS, THEN DEPARTS

And Detective Bresnahan winked and was gone—back to the office of Governor Charles F. Hurley.

Bresnahan, who vies with Capt. Jack Dorsey for sartorial splendor, has been assigned to Governor Hurley since before Hurley was inaugurated. He knows more about the police department, it is said, than most detectives—and so, it is said, does the Governor.

In last week's big shakeup, Bresnahan was shifted from his nominal assignment in the office of the supervisor of cases, to the detective bureau and the pickpocket squad.

For two days, at rollcall, he failed to appear, and Deputy Superintendent James R. Claflin said he was missing.

ASSIGNED TO GOVERNOR

"I am reporting to you, Mr. Commissioner," said Bresnahan, addressing Fallon. "I've read in the papers that I'm missing. I've been assigned to the Governor's office, since 'way back, and have not received any other notification, either at my home or the State House."

"Then I suppose you'll have to go back to the Governor's office," said Fallon.

Which was what Detective Bresnahan did, after a brief encounter with the boys in the press room where he indulged in his joke (?) and his wink.

SAFETY PARLEY OPENS HERE

Discussion of the Social Security Act, in which Mayor Mansfield, Lieutenant-Colonel A. H. B. Lyman, U. S. Army engineer in the Boston district, and Harry E. Gould, executive of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation took part, featured the morning session of the Massachusetts Safety conference being held at the Statler.

The conference convened here for a two-day meeting.

Richard Lincoln, Boston, vice-president of the industrial division and chairman of the Massachusetts Safety Council, presided at the general industrial session this morning.

Other conferences held today included one on "Fire Prevention" and "Waste."

America suffered a loss of one million dollars a week more in 1936 than the year before due to fires, declared T. Alfred Fleming of the department of conservation, National Board of Fire Underwriters, New York.

Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin and Fire Chief Samuel J. Pope also spoke at this conference.

Approximately 1000 are attending the sessions at the Statler.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

BY Ann Marsters

Now that the warmer breezes are beginning to come to town, people, young and old, are getting out their bicycles again.

ANN MARSTERS

One of the favorite spots of Boston cyclists is the reservoir out near Boston College. And someday, if you're driving by, you may happen to catch a glimpse of a rather amazing bicycle.

It is a red and white affair equipped with lights and a speedometer and all sorts of trick gadgets that you can imagine on a bicycle. It cost several times as much as an ordinary bicycle.

It belongs to a young man named Griswold Hayward, Jr., who lives with his grandmother, Mrs. G. G. Hayward, of Marlborough street. He has a LaSalle coupe, and on the top of it is a specially-designed carrier for his bicycle. It's a kind of trunk which is held on to the top of the car by suction pumps which are operated by the vacuum from the motor. (It sounds complicated but it always works.)

Mr Hayward goes bicycling for two reasons: Exercise and recreation. And he goes every day—"that is," he says "if the weather isn't too inclement."

Wedding Gowns Shown in Bright Colors

It will probably take conventional brides-to-be quite a while to adopt the new idea of pastel-colored wedding gowns. People seem to think that white wedding gowns are an ancient tradition—but you should see the exhibition of bridal dresses which has come to the Widener library in Cambridge.

You would discover that the colors of gowns worn by long-ago brides in distant lands range from black to bright red.

In Bohemia, the customary bridal gown was of dull black. And red and green wedding gowns are on display—which were worn in France and England in the early 19th century.

The Widener exhibition deals also with strange marriage rites. You may learn, for instance, that in the Turkish marriage procession, the bride rode to her groom's house on horseback. And over both the lady and her horse, servants carried a huge veil to hide them from public view. (Such a bride probably didn't care WHAT color wedding gown she wore.)

The sea stretched east; and to the west
There rose the dusky blur
Of distant hills, and between these

Seemed mossy—and life was sweet . . .
Oh, was it you or the driving wind
That swept me off my feet?

Lucius Beebe Gets Chance to Enter Film Work

On the other hand, we have Lucius Beebe who is being considered as a picture possibility. He is from Boston, you know; became a New York columnist, and got himself the reputation of being one of the world's best-dressed men. He is also the author of "Boston and the Boston Legend."

The director of that show, Bob Sinclair, has been signed by Warner Brothers . . . And at least a half dozen beautiful young things in "Babes in Arms" will soon be given movie contracts.

BOSTON after DARK

(There was a very pretty reunion yesterday at St. Elizabeth's Hospital when Johnny Mack, of the class of March 25, hobbled back to the old alma mater on a cane and visited with the Holland, who is hardly on the dean's list for a bow-out yet.

It was a very happy reunion, nurses reporting that they heard a peal of one laughter during the obsequies.)

GEORGE HOLLAND

The Boston girl was in a New Jersey city when she bought a vanity case for $1.69 . . . Several hours later, in a New York store, she sighted the same article for $1.39. . . . To make sure, she picked one up and compared the two . . . Then she dropped her own back in her handbag, and a gentleman placed his hand on her shoulder, requesting her to step to the office . . .

Imperiously he halted her attempt to explain and with fury in her heart she accompanied him upstairs . . . After listening to a well-rehearsed prologue she interrupted and said she preferred to do the talking . . . And she produced the vanity and her New Jersey sales slip . . . Instantly they were all apologies . . . if they could only make amends . . . Ah, if the lady would only select anything in the store, it would be delivered to her home, free of any cost . . . They took the majors when the money was snapped . . . She would have their best grand piano please . . .

Anna Sten Gets New Chance

Los Angeles, April 5 Anna Sten, Samuel Goldwyn's most expensive experiment, is at last returning to the screen.

Miss Sten, who has talent and who has always been a European favorite, somehow did not click in her American pictures. Now she is due for another try and has just signed a contract with Grand National films, the new movie organization. She will be seen in "Gorgeous" with friend husband, Eugene Frenke, always her severest critic, as her producer-director.

Louella O. Parsons

In return for "Gorgeous," the beauteous Sten arranges to have Grand National release "Two Who Dared," the movie she made in England last year with Henry Wilcoxon. At the time this picture hit the screen there was considerable talk about it but for some reason it was never released in the U. S. A.

The rumor circulated around Hollywood that, because of Loretta Young's enormous popularity in "Love Is News" and the great demand for her services, she would be put into "Jean" in place of Simone Simon has been squashed.

The little French girl plays Joan as scheduled and Loretta goes into "Second Honeymoon," a story by Philip Wylie with Tyrone Power as her co-star. E. H. Griffith megaphones.

Mark Sandrich is going gunning for New York musical talent with everything but a six-shooter on his hip when he leaves here soon. RKO and Producer Felix Young are ready out for big names to support Irene Dunn in "The Joy of Loving" so no less than the director of the opus is heading eastward to fire away on Broadway "big shots" with contracts.

Understand the first aims will be at Ethel Merman and Jimmy Durante's famous snozzle—and mighty fine to have them both back in the movies.

Snapshots of Hollywood

JOAN CRAWFORD and FRANCHOT TONE getting ready to light out for New York on a three weeks' vacation; GLADYS UNGER, w. k. writer, critically ill following a serious operation; the IRVING BERLINS renting NORMA TALMADGE'S beach house, which probably means that she and GEORGE JESSEL won't return to Hollywood for the summer.

CHICO MARX, the proud father, choo-chooing to New York to attend the graduation exercises of his daughter MAXINE from a music academy. She will sail for Europe immediately to complete her studies; CY BARTLETT, ALICE WHITE'S ex, and JUDY FORD are Hollywood's most conspicuous twosome at the moment. WYNNE GIBSON and EDWARD LUDWIG, PEGGY SHANNON and ALLAN DAVIS, all in a romantic daze.

Continues At Shubert

Mitzie Green is one of the stars of "Babes in Arms," now in its final week at the Shubert. The cast includes a number of newcomers to the stage, some still in their teens and just embarking on their stage careers.

All Camera Fans Invited

It will be field-day for amateur candid camera fans this afternoon and evening on the Keith-Boston stage, where all c. c. fans have been invited following the N. T. G. revue show to take pictures of the girls. N. T. G. is offering cash prizes for the best shots.

TILDEN, 44, DUELS PERRY AT GARDEN

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER
BOSTON, MONDAY, APRIL 5, 1937

MR. BOSTON

Girl Athletes Captivate City

Perry Fortunate To Get Open Date

By JACK CONWAY

FRED PERRY, the greatest tennis player in the world, will display his amazing skill against the veteran, Bill Tilden, at the Garden tonight. He will also try to steal the spotlight for a few hours at least away from the brilliant array of girl athletes who have taken this man's town very much by storm.

Mr Boston

First there was Sonja Henie, with her marvelous skating ability and million dollars' worth of personality. Then the colorful and dashing Melitta Brunner, girl skater from Vienna, who featured the Boston Skating Club's show "Cracked Ice."

It is well that Perry is doing his stuff tonight as Eleanor Holm Jarrett, world champion woman swimmer, is edging up to the front of the sports stage for the Water Follies at the Arena on Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

I don't believe Sonja Henie or Melitta Brunner, let alone a mere man like Fred Perry, could hope to compete with the vivacious Eleanor Holm Jarrett in a personality contest. In fact Eleanor possesses all the personal sparkle one finds in any of her favorite brands of champagne.

I regret Boston and New England sports fans will not also have an opportunity to see Helen Wills Moody play tonight. Along with Sonja Henie, Melitta Brunner and Eleanor Holm Jarrett, the capable Helen Wills Moody is in the first rank of the super-lady athletes.

* * *

PERRY HAS FIRE OF YOUTH

FRED PERRY is young, dashing, a finished tennis player and keen competitive athlete. The late Knute Rockne would say the Englishman possessed more than his share of intestinal fortitude.

Perry is naturally expected to win from Tilden, but to do so he will have to play the best game. Tilden, of course, has gone back a bit, [illegible] possesses sufficient wizardry when on a tennis court [illegible] extend himself to win.

Tennis has [illegible] in popularity during the past few years. The crowd of [illegible] persons that paid $30,000 to witness the recent match between Perry and Tilden in the New York Garden [illegible] of tennis. It also showed the public is [illegible] see Perry in action.

* * *

KARL SCHAFER PERFECT SKATER

KARL SCHAFER, the Austrian, made fancy skating look easy as he starred with Melitta Brunner in "Cracked Ice." Schafer is the perfect skater. He is so fast, graceful and sure of himself that he makes the most difficult skating feats look comparatively easy.

It takes a top skater to appreciate Schafer's remarkable ability fully. The leaders in the professional ranks insist there never was a skater who compared with Schafer in the matter of class.

"The public," said one professional, "often does not appreciate Shafer 100 per cent. He skates with so little effort one often does not realize what difficult stunts he is performing."

I liked Melitta Brunner's skating, but I would rate her second to Sonja Henie. T[illegible] a bit more graceful than the Austrian [illegible] and personality. Melitta Brunner still [illegible] certain to be well received everywhere she appears.

The [illegible] proved that the public [illegible] Melitta Brunner and Karl Schafer [illegible] strong [illegible] New York and Toronto.

The large groups of skaters also give color to the affairs sponsored by the Boston Skating Club. I always feel as I watch one of these group scenes that the skaters are having as fine a time as the spectators.

* * *

WATER FOLLIES A SPECTACLE

Elmer Wickes is fortunate in having such a personality as Eleanor Holm Jarrett to star in his offering. Eleanor has been very much in the news since she was banned from the American Olympic team for taking a few sips of champagne. She has box office appeal as well as real swimming ability.

The girl swimming champion has as much personality as Jack Dempsey. You will be interested in her performances at the Arena.

There will be more than a score of other great swimmers and [illegible] in the Water Follies. Also water clowns who will make [illegible]

"This is a great spectacle like a Ziegfeld Follies or a George White's Scandals or a performance of Cracked Ice," Wickes told me.

I [illegible] promoters as they keep right on talking [illegible] by George V. Brown, Les Stout and [illegible] the Water Follies will be the real [illegible]

Doerr, Cronin Put Red Sox on Feet

By BILL GRIMES

Sarasota, Fla., April 5—During my two weeks' stay here the Red Sox have rounded into a far more formidable aggregation than that which was originally scheduled to carry the Yawkey colors.

At that time there was some doubt as to whether or not Bobby Doerr was ready for the big time.

McNair Sits

Doerr is the talk of the camp. Despite the fact that he has connected with more hits than any other player in the Pacific Coast League and wound up the 175-game season with an average of .342, the experts were of the opinion that he wouldn't hit in big time.

Although he has not set the Grapefruit league on fire with his batting, he has greatly exceeded expectations and was the only Red Socker to come up with two hits in the Sunday game at Tampa, where he connected with a single and ringing three bagger against the Reds.

Now that Jimmy Foxx has recovered from the flu, which had him on his back for a couple of weeks, the Red Sox infield is a real big league unit.

Manager Cronin has replaced "Booby" McNair and is playing the best article of shortstopping he has shown since he came to the Red Sox. At the bat he has been outstanding, setting a fine example for his charges.

That Outfield

Mills, who spiked himself in an exhibition game, will be back in the lineup in another week or 10 days. He was to have the stitches removed today, and expects to don a uniform before the squad breaks camp on Friday.

The Red Sox lost a tough 11-inning battle to the Cincinnati Reds in Tampa, but Rube Walberg and Johnny Marcum displayed such fine form that Manager Cronin was not very much disappointed over the outcome.

Walberg let the Reds down with one scratch hit in five innings. Then Marcum went along smoothly until the eighth when a Gehbert double followed by a Jimmy Outlaw single tied the contest.

The Brooklyn Dodgers will be the attraction here tomorrow in the final game at Payn Field. Moses "Lefty" Grove will have his first try out of the spring against a big league club, for he has drawn the assignment to hurl against the Daffiness boys from Flatbush.

Wall Elected

BROMWICH

New Star of

ANZAC TEAM

New York, April 5 (AP)—Visions of an Australian Davis Cup team basing its singles hopes on two players boasting two-fisted backhands were left today in the wake of a visit from Norman Brookes.

The president of the Australian Lawn Tennis Association spent a few days here en route to England. He inspected and approved the courts at Forest Hills where the Aussies are expected to meet the United States in the North American zone final May 29, 30 and 31. He also had time to expound on the subject of Jack Bromwich, Australia's 18-year-old star, who like his countryman and Davis Cup teammate Vivian McGrath employs a two-handed backhand.

According to Brookes Bromwich is a husky youngster gifted with power and endurance. In addition to his two-fisted backhand he has developed the knack of serving with his left hand then switching his racquet to his right for subsequent strokes.

Brookes' praise of Bromwich who with the other Australians meets Mexico in Mexico City April 30, May 1-2 gave rise to the belief the youngster may be given a singles assignment against the Americans provided both come through against Mexico and Japan respectively.

Open Saturday

SIMMONS SOLD

AL SIMMONS

VETERAN GOES TO NATS

Lakeland, Fla., April 5 (INS)—Al Simmons, born Aloysius H. Szymanski 31 years ago in Milwaukee, has been purchased by the Washington baseball club from the Detroit Tigers.

The purchase figure is said to be $15,000.

The announcement was made after the Detroit-Washington game here by Managers Bucky Harris of the Senators and Mickey Cochrane of the Tigers, who declared it was a straight cash deal.

Simmons, who drew $16,000 per year from the Tigers, will be the highest paid player on the Washington roster, for Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington club, must pay the veteran outfielder the same figure.

Bees Break Camp, Release Seven

By JOE CASHMAN

Lakeland, Fla., April 5—Our bruised and battered Bees have shaken the St. Petersburg sand off their spikes—probably for the last time—and the first stop on their homeward trek finds them playing a return game with Detroit's Tigers here this p. m.

The boys are delighted to be on the road even though they face 13 straight days of traveling during which they're carded to play 11 games in nine different cities.

Dismal Stay

For as far as Grapefruit League records are concerned their five week stay in St. Pete was the most dismal of their 1[illegible] annual spring visits to that city.

Everything went wrong from start to finish.

Many players were hit by injuries or sickness.

But it's only natural that President Bob Quinn, who has never liked the place as a training site, should like it less than ever now and be determined to try to find another spot for next season's practice.

So the odds are that the Bees have done their last training in the town that's been their spring home since 19[illegible].

DiMag Stars

The last day in camp was a sorry Sunday for the McKechniemen in general and seven of them in particular.

In the morning, Rookies Bill Ford, Johnny Reis, George Gondira, Art Doll and Stanley Hoyinski were shipped off to Salisbury, N. C., where Bob Coleman will decide on what Bees' farm they'll labor this season.

In the evening, Pitchers Bill Harris and Truett Sewell were informed that they had been returned to the Buffalo Club of the International League.

Harris and Sewell, aged 3[illegible] and 30, respectively, hadn't done too poorly, McKechnie explained.

It was simply a case, the pilot said, of neither showing enough to warrant the Bees paying a substantial sum to keep them in preference to younger hurlers already owned outright by the club.

Such a flop with the stick up to Saturday last that efforts were being made to send him back to San Diego, the young Italian proved the best hitter on the club for the second successive afternoon by driving out a double and single for two of the five hits collected off "Bucky" Walter and Wayne "Lefty" Lamasters.

In his last nine times at bat, Vince has made four sharp hits and drawn two walks. A few more such days, and the idea of sending him back should be forgotten.

Lou Fette and Guy Bush have been nominated to do the [illegible] today against the Tigers, who are one of the three clubs the Bees managed to whip in 1[illegible] starts at St. Pete.

Our heroes' next game will be against the Cards tomorrow at Daytona Beach where Dapper Danny MacFayden will be the first Bees pitcher to work nine innings this spring if he proves equal to the task.

Tech, Springfield In Lacrosse Tilt

M. I. T.'s varsity lacrosse team, drubbed by the Boston Lacrosse Club in the opener, will open its New England league season with Springfield, defending champions, on Wednesday at the Tech coop field.

Tech did show a strong defense against the club, repeatedly setting back the former college stars when goals seemed certain.

But lack of scoring punch irks Coach Tommy Tucker and this afternoon's drill will see a few new faces in the varsity lineup.

London, April 5 (AP)—The Jack Doyle-King Levinsky fight originally scheduled for tomorrow night will be held April 27 at Wembley Stadium. The fight was postponed when Doyle was injured in training.

BIG BILL Sentimental CHOICE

YOUNG BRITON SHOULD WIN

Vines, Too

The Perry-Tilden match is scheduled to start promptly at 9 p.m. while the Lott-Richards singles gets under way at 8:15. The feature will be best three out of five.

FRED HOEY Writes:

DETROIT'S TROUT GOOD CATCH
HAS PERSONALITY PLUS ABILITY

Hello Everybody. This Is Fred Hoey Speaking.

We've seen Mickey Cochrane in all his brilliance run a football field, and we've seen him run the bases. Also we expect to see him run an aquarium if he continues to add fishy names to his Detroit roster.

FRED HOEY

The Tigers have had Art Herring; they just missed grabbing Clarence Pickrel, and now they time their presentation with the opening of the fishing season by introducing Pitcher Paul Howard Trout, giant right hander from Indianapolis.

Quite a card this Trout. He's a rainbow trout, so to speak, with plenty of color. Oversized, as the fish limit goes, 6 ft. 2 in. and weighing 195 pounds, but it will take more than a fish warden to send him back to the sticks, judging by the way he's producing for the Tigers in the South.

This youngster . . . he's only 21 . . . had a most original method for developing control when he made his home in Terre Haute, Ind. He used to go along the country roads knocking the insulators off telegraph poles just to get control. Unless a youngster wants to make the acquaintance of John Law we wouldn't advise this form of practise around these parts. Paul threw walnuts at squirrels when he was a kid. He's been around squirrels ever since.

Trout, who won eight and lost seven for Indianapolis, is an industrious letter writer as well as a voluble young man. He answers everything, from the first call to the dining room to requests for autographs from all the Mickey Maguires.

Our Lowell fact-finder, John Mullen, passes along a letter he just received, air mail naturally, from Trout in which the Dizzy one furnishes the hows, when and whys.

"The reason for naming me Dizzy is like this," pops off Trout. "Two springs ago I was attending Otto Creek High School in North Terre Haute, Ind., a township school.

"It was advertised around that a baseball school was to be held in the Stadium Hut. So I worked out in the school gym and was in great shape to throw the apple with plenty of smoke.

"I was the hit of the school. All the other fellows said to me, 'You dizzy guy, you'll throw your arm away.' And they got to calling me Dizzy, until finally I was in the spotlight on the ball field.

"Then a sports writer put it in the paper that I throw 'em like the great Diz, and with my ability to tell yarns and blow off I was given the name of Dizzy It never makes me mad, for a name never hurts anybody unless it's the slurring kind."

Underneath Trout's showmanship there's a heart of gold and he loves the game. During the play-offs last year in Indianapolis he climbed into the stands and K. O.'d a fan who was razzing the Indianapolis pitchers.

Trout gives Wade Killefer and Bill Burwell credit for his development, but he expects to go a long way under Mickey Cochrane, and that long way will not be in the direction of down river.

VOTE FOR HUGHIE DUFFY

The Hall of Fame committee wants all baseball fans, especially the older ones, to write to Sporting News and name 10 players of early days who they believe should have their names placed in Baseball's Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N. Y.

If possible, fans sending in their selections should give reasons for choosing players they name. Hugh Duffy, along with Willie Keeler, Marty Bergen, Ed Walsh, Charlie Radbourne and Pop Anson, have an excellent chance to be chosen. But it needs your vote.

Your list, with Hugh Duffy's name included, should be sent to The Sporting News, Tenth and Olive streets, St. Louis, Mo.

SELF MADE MILLIONAIRES

Canada may not contribute many native stars to our major leagues, but the Dominion fans can chuckle when reference is made about Tom Yawkey and Colonel Ruppert being the wealthiest owners in organized baseball. Genial Tom and the Colonel have been represented as worth very heavy potatoes, far into the millions, but it looks as though "heavy sugar" honors go to the six backers of the Toronto club of the International League.

Every one of these Toronto backers is a millionaire. One of them is rated at 20 million, and another is said to be worth anywhere from 25 to 40 million.

While Yawkey accumulated his wealth through mines, pulp mills and divers other enterprizes, and Ruppert's fortune has been drawn through the spigot, so to speak, from his vast brewery lay-out, these modern Croesuses in Toronto have had a totally different way of rolling up the dough.

Tommy Soole is a printer, Ed Mack a tailor, Jim McCaffrey a hotelkeeper, and Lol Solman operates amusement concessions. We have no record of the other two Toronto backers except to say they need not worry about tomorrow's breakfast.

This is a concrete illustration of President Bob Quinn's recent situation. With millions at his command, Dan Howley, manager of the Toronto team, is unable to buy players from the major leagues. Dan has been in the South for weeks trying to pry loose some talent from the majors with no success.

CLASHES WITH JOHNSON

George Harben, Australian heavyweight wrestling champion who meets 365-pound Tor Johnson in the headline bout at Boston Garden Friday night, yesterday notified Promoter Paul Bowser that he would establish headquarters in this city.

Harben, who has been in this country but a short while, now is living in New York, where he trains daily at George Bothner's gymnasium.

"I will be available for you after I dispose of Johnson," Harben says. "I expect to remain in Boston and will take on anybody you send in against me. I want to stay there and force Yvon Robert to give me a shot at his title. That is why I came to this country."

But Bowser, who has Robert signed for his first title defense when he returns to the wars, may encounter trouble before he stages a championship affair. Jack Ganson, Montreal promoter, is here and declares he will have Robert in the latter's first title defense.

"Robert verbally agreed to defend his championship for me before he takes on anybody anywhere else," Ganson declares. "I will hold him to it. Montreal deserves the match as that is his home city. I deserve a first crack at his services because he won the championship at my club.

Johnson, who has polished off three opponents, each in less than four minutes, in his only Boston appearances, is going through hard training paces.

Jimmy Sarandos, unbeaten Greek, and George (Wildcat) Wilson, former University of Washington gridder, are getting in shape for their semi-final. Wee Willie Davis, a 305-pounder, will make his local debut Friday by attempting to beat three opponents in one hour.

Entries Close For Nationals

With a deadline of April 5 for accepting entries for the National Boxing championships, which are to be held at the Boston Garden on April 12, 13, 14, district associations from all sections of the country are hurrying their forms to Boston.

Present indications point to the 1937 championship being the largest in the history of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Tom Kanaly, tournament director, received the signed blanks of the Michigan Association, the Northeastern Ohio Association and the winners of the industrial championships, which were recently completed at Flint, Michigan.

The Detroit team, all Michigan Association champions, is made up of Patsy Urso, bantamweight; Edgar Waling, featherweight; Lonnie Wright, lightweight; Buddy Waterman and Percy Jones, welterweights; Ted Cerwise, middleweight; Timmie Hill, lightheavyweight, and Robert Dennis, heavyweight.

The Industrial champions from Flint, Mich., will be Gus DeMaria, flyweight; Pete Casadonte, bantamweight; William Eddy, featherweight; Bill Starkoll, lightweight; Harold Pilion, welterweight; Royal Gauthier, middleweight; George Bodovinits, light-heavyweight, and Johnny Summers, heavyweight.

The Cleveland team will be made up of Patsy Guerra, 112 pounds, Johnny Soca and Midgo Mangine, 126 pounds; Henry Pershing, 135 pounds; John Bonus, 147 pounds; Joe Sper, 160 pounds; George Humphries, 175 pounds, and Lemuel Franklin, heavyweight. Franklin has appeared in Boston at two intercity shows, sponsored by the Irish American A. A., and proved a great card and is a very likely-looking claimant for national heavyweight honors.

East-West Polo Tourney in Gotham

New York, April 5 (AP)—Indoor polo will reach its seasonal climax here this week with the start of the East-West national championships in senior, junior and Sherman Memorial (low goal) divisions, usually productive of the top mallet-swinging and riding of the indoor season

Each of the three divisions includes an Eastern and Western representative, who will battle for the title in a two-out-of-three match series. The play will start Wednesday night at Squadron A Armory, marking the first invasion of the East by the Westerners since 1935.

LEIBER RETURNS TO GIANTS

San Bernardino, Calif., April 5 (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates played their last game in California today against the San Bernardino Merchants. Tonight they will start an exhibition tour which will bring them east.

Galveston, Tex.—The New York Yankees, who set a new American League record for homer runs last season, are begining to warm to their work. Thus far they have hit nine circuit clouts with Bill Dickey and Tony Lazzeri leading with two apiece.

Baton Rogue, La.—Hank Leiber, New York Giant outfielder who was beaned by one of Bob Feller's pitchers, was X-rayed and returned to the team to report no serious injury had resulted.

Clearwater, Fla.—Burleigh Grimes seems to be setting an all-time high in Grapefruit League combativeness. The Brooklyn Dodgers' manager engaged in a heated argument with Umpire George Magerkurth yesterday.

New Orleans—The Cleveland Indians broke camp and set out today with the New York Giants aboard a special train on a northward exhibition series jaunt, Manager Steve O'Neill scheduled Lloyd Brown and Paul Andrews to hurl for the tribe today at Baton Rouge.

Winter Haven, Fla.—The Cincinnati Reds started their northward trek today, heading here from Tampa to meet the Phillies. Lloyd "Whitey" Moore was Mgr. Chuck Dressen's pitching choice.

Pitchers Bucky Walters and Wayne Lamaster of the Phils limited the Boston Bees to five hits in a 4-0 victory yesterday and extended the string of innings in which they have held rival teams runless to 32.

San Antonio, Tex.—The Philadelphia Athletics baseball squad divided again today. The regulars, headed by Coach Earl Mack, play the University of Texas nine at Austin and the "B" team meets St. Paul, of the American Association, at Marshall, Texas.

Tucson, Ariz.—The Cubs and White Sox will meet again today, with the Bruins seeking to make it two straight. Frank Demaree's tenth inning single scored Cavarretta and gave the Cubs a 2-1 win yesterday at Phoenix.

Daytona Beach, Fla.—Manager Frank Frisch held down the third sack against the Washington Senators today, in an effort to tighten ragged Cardinal fielding. If his performance satisfies himself, Frisch indicated he may remain at that corner when the season opens.

Police Hunt Slayer of Bill Daughtrey

Portsmouth, Va., April 5 (AP)—An unidentified knife wielder who killed William E. Daughtrey, former college star athlete, and seriously wounded a navy sailor, was sought today by Portsmouth police.

Daughtrey, an all-round athlete at Hampden-Sydney about three years ago, died 15 minutes after he was cut on the head and in the stomach on the Norfolk ferry boat as it neared the Portsmouth docks last night. He was between 25 and 28 years of age.

Police Captain James Talbot said the slayer apparently believed Daughtrey, his young wife and two friends were "laughing at him" and resented it.

J. E. Brooks, sailor on the battleship New York, was severely slashed as he attempted to separate Daughtrey and his assailant. Brooks was taken to Naval Hospital.

The killer ran across the ferry wharf as the boat docked and escaped.

FIFTH RACE

Bowie, Md., April 5—Mrs. M. N. Bond's Pencader, hard-hitting plater, needs only to duplicate his last race —a bang up second to Some Bull— to down less capable opposition opposing him in the mile and 70 yards of the fifth number here tomorrow.

Pencader, with Apprentice Hubert LeBlanc slated to do honors easily shapes up as the outstanding hazard on another difficult card of seven races.

FIRST—Blue Grotto, Tuleyries Lin, Bentham

BLUE GROTTO stepped four panels in :47 2-5 to easily lead home Rich Cream and other shifty platers in his final at Tropical Park Off that good effort, I find it impossible to go past the A. C Rose colorbearer in searching for the winner

TULEYRIES LIN equalled the local track record in accounting for her final at Oaklawn Park May be heaps better than rated BENTHAM has an excellent New Orleans record to recommend him for the balance

SECOND—Timber Lady, Swift Flash, Wise Bun

TIMBER LADY, if up to a hard race, should experience little difficulty clicking here. The Tall Timber filly could pull a wagon and drug similar opposition last fall Six furlongs in 1 17 attests to fitness. SWIFT FLASH'S last race was in the nature of a conditioner and should not be taken too seriously. The W. E. Johnson colorbearer is ideally suited by all conditions and may upset at juicy odds. WISE BUN just missed drubbing Heartease in his last race.

THIRD—Momentary, Capt. Jerry, Zembla.

MOMENTARY was conditioned in Florida and brought here for a killing. He is partial to the local racing strip and needs only an equal shake in racing luck to score CAPT. JERRY, dead short in last race, figures next best in what appears to be strictly a two-horse race. ZEMBLA, on class alone shapes up well in the fight for minor honors

FOURTH—Aroused, Bill Donoghue, Black Highbrow

AROUSED on general Hot Springs form, shapes up superior to this shifty group of Class C handicap performers. The B. F Christmas color bearer is very partial to the Bowie racing strip BILL DONOGHUE holds plenty of class, but he was unable to cope with the top selection in two meetings at Oaklawn Park. BLACK HIGHBROW is really the class, but I have a hunch that he may not like the track.

Fifth Race—Pencader, Maddening, Mr. Quick

PENCADER will probably have MADDENING to down for major honors. The latter was conditioned in Florida and she is very partial to the track

MR. QUICK, if up to a hard race should prove difficult to crowd out of the show position.

SIXTH—Building Trades, Chief Yeoman, Hunterdon

SEVENTH RACE—Naval Cadet, Tragedian, Relativity.

NAVAL CADET is a real "Bowie horse" and he jumps up many pounds on the local strip. Recent Texas form was nothing to enthuse about, but its good enough to give the Shandon color bearer a royal chance in a cheap affair of this sort. TRAGEDIAN, another clever Bowie performer, looms all over the main danger. He received tighteners at Oaklawn. RELATIVITY'S race was in the nature of a conditioner.

Two Bike Teams Lead at Louisville

Louisville, Ky., April 5 (AP)—heT Winter-Otevaere and Sheehan-O'Brien teams held the lead with 2266 miles and nine laps each as the six-day bicycle race neared an end here today.

HOW TO SWIM BACKSTROKE

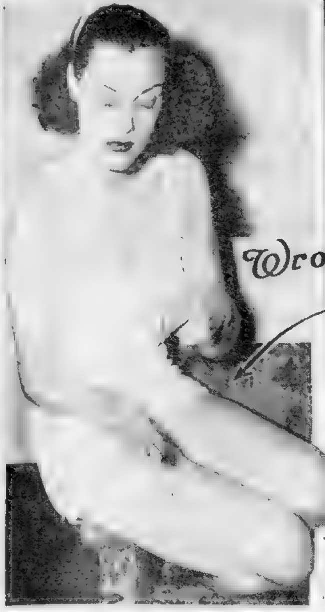
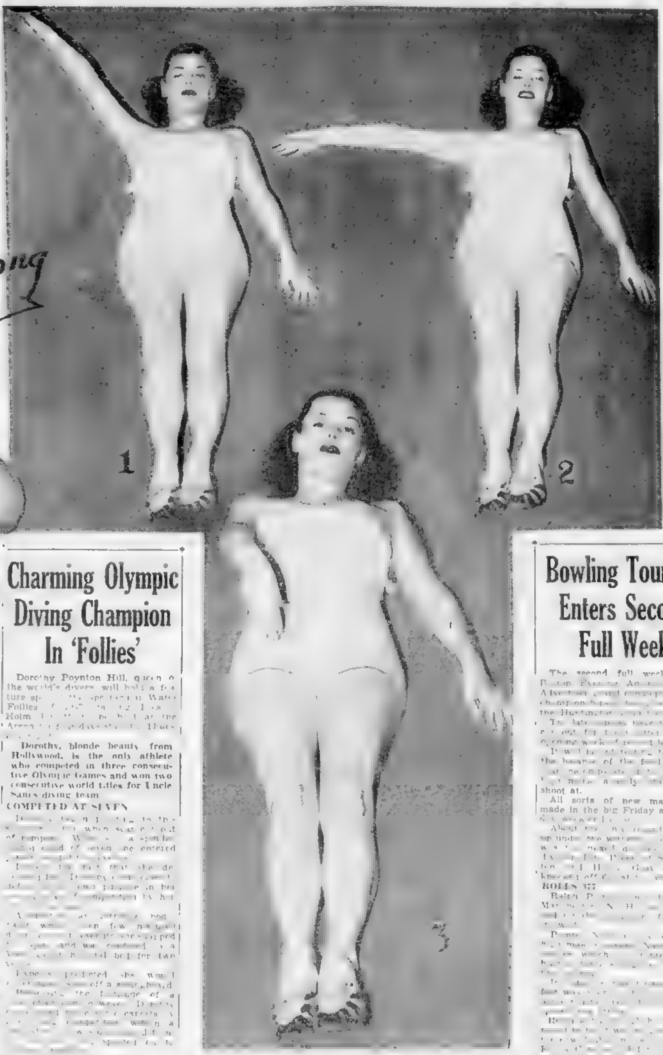
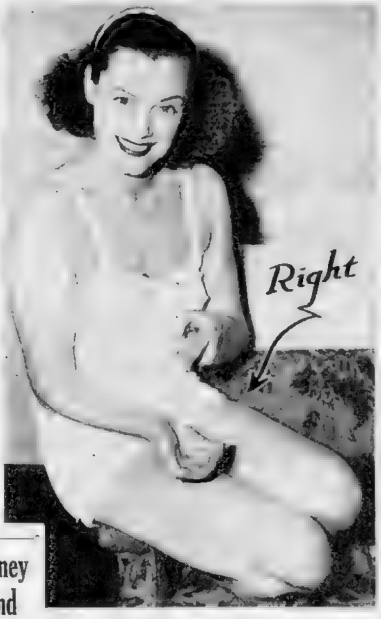
APPEARS IN ARENA FOLLIES



"This is the wrong way to hold hand when doing the backstroke," says pretty Eleanor Holm Jarrett in her swimming [illegible]



Eleanor Holm Jarrett demonstrates the correct way to use arms in doing the backstroke. 1—Stretch arm above head and reach far back. 2—At the half-way mark arm is like this in a depth of about 12 to 15 inches of water. 3—As arm comes to surface near the thigh, bring it up again. Note position of hand and kick of legs.



"This is the correct way to hold hand when performing the backstroke if you want to win races," says the swim queen.

Beauty Show At Arena

There will be a special contest for bathing beauties in connection with the great Water Follies which open at the Arena on Thursday night.

Eleanor Holm Jarrett will head the committee that will pick the New England girl with the most dizzle.

If you are pleasant to look at and have one of the latest model bathing suits and desire to go places in beauty competition send your entry to Elbert Wickes, Water Follies, Boston Arena. Also send a photograph of yourself to Mr. Wickes and include your name and age.

Sorry, but you must be 16 years old and just a bit beautiful to compete. Personality always counts in a beauty contest.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

A Nationwide Organization Devoted To American Youth in Aviation

By L. F. Ross
Boston Wing Commander

Demonstrating how they make model airplanes and their various parts, one of the most absorbingly interesting of all hobbies, Junior Birdmen of the Boston American wing, will provide one of the feature attractions of the Leisure Show which opens Wednesday at Mechanics building and lasts through Sunday.

Using their own materials and the tools they utilize in their homes and squadron club quarters, girl and boy model builders will be shown engaged in making various types of planes, including solid scale flying scale, and outdoor and indoor flying models.

The Junior Birdmen exhibit, in booth 205 on the main floor of the exposition, will include the William Randolph Hearst trophy, a number of outstanding model planes and the wing honor banner recently won by the Speed Aces of Banks-Newhall schools, Waltham.

Junior Birdmen literature will be on hand for all air-minded boys and girls and the model builders and other attendants will be glad to answer any questions on model making or on the Junior Birdmen organization by children or adult spectators.

George Abagis, Bernard Woodman, Jack Bronski, Gordon Cain, Agnes Anderson, Martin Phillips, Sanford Oringer, James Corcoran, Herbert Weiss and Georgette "Dick" Meyer.

Other hobbies and leisure time interests which entertain both young and old will be shown in about 50 other exhibits, including stationary and moving displays and demonstrations.

The International Business Machine Co. will show a wide variety of movies and as a feature will conduct a voting contest to determine the most popular motion picture actress and actor. Votes will be tabulated in four ways and the standings kept up to date to indicate the opinions of men, women, girls and boys as separate classes.

The journalism class of the Boys' Club of Boston will publish a miniature newspaper twice a day, obtaining interviews from prominent persons who attend, and news from exhibitors and portraying all the efforts that go into such work. S. J. Co[illegible], vocational director, will have charge.

Nine camera clubs under the direction of Franklin I. Jordan, will present the best work of their members. Some of the pictures have been traveling for six years and have been shown in various parts of the country.

Miss Alice Kendall of the Museum of Natural History will have charge of the Junior Explorers' booth, showing geological and other "finds" of the members. Three co-operative groups affiliated with the Harvard Observatory, the Bond Astronomical Society, the Amateur Telescope Makers of Boston and the Variable Star Observers will have a display aimed to arouse more interest in the study of the heavens.

Old time wood and modern canoes will be shown by the U. S. Canoe Racing Association headed by John F. Yeader. A parody on the "Taming of the Shrew" will be presented by the Community S[illegible] of Boston under the direction of Miss Clara E. Wagner.

A marionette show will be operated by the well-known F[illegible] family, including John and R[illegible], who are twins. They will use [illegible]0 marionettes and over [illegible] different voice characters.

A unique stamp collection arranged by the Central New England Stamp Collectors will be headed by Houghton Sanguinetti.

The Dickensian atmosphere will be recorded, with girls dressed in the costumes worn during Dickens' time in the booth of the Dickens Fellowship of which Edwin Payne is president.

Woodworking, stamp collection and photography will be offered at the exhibit of the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. which has a leisure time program for its employes.

"Where to Go" will be expressed in the exhibit of the New England Regional Commission. A big cross word puzzle will be the feature of the National Puzzle League. Everett E. Smith will have charge.

Other exhibitors will include the Y. M. C. U. featuring a fencing display, the Denison House, League of Nations, the National Youth Administration, the C. C. C. and the Y. M. C. A.

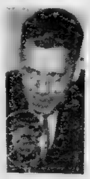
Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

IT'S to be "A Farewell to Arms" in the "Radio Theater" scheme of things (WEEI) tonight at 9 o'clock, with Clark Gable and Josephine Hutchinson moving from movieland long enough to give loudspeakers a version of the war drama as adapted from the stage and screen setting.

All of which marks the third appearance by Gable behind the "mike" for Cecil B. DeMille as a star in the soap flake sponsored studio show. Recent naming of the "Radio Theater" hour as the top dramatic day diversion current on the air, so designated by the Woman's National Radio committee, will call for a verbal bow on the part of the backers and Mr. DeMille. Also to be heard in a principal supporting part during the broadcast will be Adolphe Menjou, who was in the cast of the picture of the same name.



"N. F. T."

FLEETING FLASHES

Lovers of the romantic semi-classic selection "I Love You Truly," by Carrie Jacobs Bond, will wish to hear Vivian Della Chiesa sing it (WNAC) with the Frank Black orchestra at 10 o'clock.

Tennis fine points come in for discussion this afternoon (WBZ) when "Big Bill" Tilden and Ellsworth Vines come together for a special interview at 4:30, the questioning to be by Arthur W. Ingalls, former secretary of the Longwood Cricket Club.

Something full of thrills is holding forth during the "20,000 Years in Sing Sing" dramatic half hour (WNAC) tonight at 9 o'clock. It's to be all about a mobster who was believed to be dead but demonstrated that he was very much alive.

THIS EAR—THAT AIR

Jack Benny will observe his fifth anniversary as a kilocycle star on his broadcast of May 2. The suave jester has made an enviable record. For years running the nation's radio editors have voted him leading comic. Three years running they have chosen his programs the outstanding favorites among all types of shows and his sponsor recently signed a contract which will keep him on the air Sunday evenings until the summer of 1940.

Japanese Charged With Protecting Huge Dope Ring

New York, April 5—Charges that the Japanese concession in Tientsin is the headquarters for a vast international narcotic industry are made by the Council of International Affairs in its current information bulletin.

The bulletin, published in Nanking, China, declares:

"This industry has spread throughout the Far East and has direct connections with narcotic rings in Europe and the Americas.

"During the past three years this industry has grown to such an extent that the Tientsin Japanese concession has practically become the world heroin capital.

"This has led to a growing belief that narcotics are being employed by Japan as an instrument of national policy designed to weaken and debauch the Chinese race."

One of the largest "syndicates" is engaged in exporting opium and other narcotics to the United States, according to the bulletin, which adds:

"All of the big syndicates are Chinese owned and operated with a Japanese 'front' so that they can claim the privilege of extraterritoriality

"Japanese investments in the business are insignificant, but it is the Japanese protection that makes it possible for outlaw Chinese to operate."

Japanese officials condone the business, the bulletin declares, but will not permit exports through Japan. The bulletin adds:

"Thus it is that American newspaper readers are told another shipment of narcotics 'from Shanghai' or 'from China' is seized, and so Japan's name is unsullied and China's reputation is blackened."

SCHOOL BOARD LAW SOUGHT

The Boston school committee was today preparing a bill for the legislature seeking permission to fill a board vacancy by majority vote of the committee, the mayor and the city council president, until the following election.

This action was taken, with Dr. Joseph V. Lyons the only dissenter, to name a successor to Dr. Charles E. Mackey, board member, who was slain 11 days ago in South Boston. The four members now comprising the committee must vote unanimously on all matters in connection with the school budget, now under consideration.

The committee majority felt such legislation would save the city the expense of calling a special election to fill the vacancy.

It was also voted to support a city council motion calling for a moment of silence in Boston city schools in memory of the death of 400 pupils and teachers in the New London, Texas, gas blast.

Fire Levels Hotel In Atlantic City

Atlantic City, April 5 (INS)—The $300,000 six-story wood-frame Hotel Grand Atlantic here was swept by fire today and collapsed after firemen turned from the stubborn blaze to protect other wooden structures nearby.

Two Atlantic City firemen were injured. The hotel was unoccupied.

KELLY VETOES BIG RECEPTION

Hearing reports he would be met at the South Station with a big reception on his return from a honeymoon, probably in a "boom for mayor" move, Lieut. Gov. Kelly had today wired his secretary, James T. Burke, to call off any demonstration in his honor.

If the reception cannot be cancelled, Kelly declared he would change his time of arrival and let no one in on the secret. The telegram, from Washington, read:

"Have heard from newspaper reporters in Washington that I am being boomed for Mayor of Boston and that enthusiastic demonstration is to be given at South Station. Contact leaders of this movement and tell them I want quiet return from honeymoon.

"Tell friends I do not want to discuss politics on return to Boston. If you cannot stop reception, I will change return plans so that no one will know time of arrival."

PRIEST WARNS AGAINST REDS

A warning to combat radical doctrines with religious understanding was given members of the Federation of College Clubs at their annual communion breakfast in the Copley-Plaza by Rev. Joseph F. MacDonnell of Weston College. The speaker said:

"It seems to me very important that Catholics should understand their position as Catholics in the present social crisis. Catholics must take a part in this social reconstruction. They cannot avoid it."

Instead of listening to radicals, the public should pay attention to men who have made outstanding successes of their lives, he said, adding:

"Only recently the President said: 'There will be a denial of God, but unless we have a moral God we will not have a lasting democracy.' It is true, God is needed for the success of democracy and the nation."

World Fair Names Hughes Air Chief

New York, April 5 (US)—Appointment of Howard Hughes, internationally known flier and holder of numerous flight records, as aeronautical advisor to the New York World's Fair of 1939, was announced by Grover Whalen, president of the fair corporation who said:

"The great part which aviation will increasingly play in 'the world of tomorrow'—which is the creative spirit of the World's Fair—must be apparent to everyone. In recognition of this, we sought the aid of Mr. Hughes."

Belmont Group Hears Jesolowitz

A Spokesman in Congress For the Taxpayer

THE FORTHRIGHT expressions on the subject of new taxes by Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee show that the taxpayer still has a spokesman in Congress.

Questioned about the prospect that Federal revenues from income taxes will be less than expected, Mr. Doughton replied in effect that government SPENDING should in that event be REDUCED ACCORDINGLY.

He said: "If collections are several hundred million dollars short, I will favor cutting budget estimates and retrenching on expenditures."

He also said: "The time has arrived for us to be more cautious and to get away from emergency expenditures in order to HELP THE TAXPAYER. I favor retrenchment RATHER THAN NEW TAXES."

CONGRESSMAN Fred A. Hartley of New Jersey is another spokesman who is talking about taxes from the viewpoint of the man who PAYS.

Mr. Hartley said in a recent radio address that the Federal Government collected four billion dollars in taxes in 1936, and spent eight billions.

He asked a pointed question about where the money is coming from, and answered himself by citing the obvious fact that most of it is BEING BORROWED.

He then noted that as a result of government borrowing the nation now has a public debt of 35 billion dollars, WHICH IS $1400 FOR EVERY AMERICAN FAMILY.

But the question about where the money is coming from STILL REMAINS, because borrowed money MUST BE PAID.

IT is not coming from rich people, for they are already being taxed close to confiscation.

As Mr. Hartley says, the government could COMPLETELY IMPOVERISH ALL PEOPLE EARNING OVER FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS A YEAR, and still be entirely without funds for five months out of the year.

ONLY ELEVEN PER CENT OF THE NATIONAL INCOME goes to people earning over five thousand dollars a year.

The people who get the remaining 89 per cent of the national income GET IT IN WAGES.

These are the people who pay the bulk of the current taxes, and who will have to pay off the national debt.

WHEN Mr. Doughton, therefore, speaks of the necessity of achieving a balanced budget through REDUCTION OF SPENDING, he is not speaking for corporations, or for millionaires.

He is the spokesman for the man who LIVES OUT OF A PAY ENVELOPE, because 89 per cent of the national income goes into that envelope, and MOST OF THE TAXES MUST ULTIMATELY COME OUT OF IT.

A Noteworthy Decision

THE UNANIMOUS decision of the Florida Supreme Court that public officials must not interfere with newspaper reporters or camera-men engaged in gathering news information of public interest is a signal victory for the freedom of the press.

The highest court of Florida says also that public records are available for inspection by ANY CITIZEN and newspaper representatives are entitled to examine them at will.

Photographers are entitled to the same privileges as reporters, the court holds, because "THE CAMERA ALSO REPORTS THE NEWS."

The freedom of the press in its portrayal, by word and picture, of all public events and the right of the press to examine all public records are the very palladium of our liberties.

Life Worth Living

Voicing this opinion at Boston's Wesleyan University Alumni Club, he declared:

"The world is full of fear. The President, in his second inaugural address, said he would try to solve the problems of the individual which the individual is not able to solve for himself.

"And now we have set up an ideal which we call 'security' and which, it seems to me, is the very ANTITHESIS of life itself.

"If life is to be worth living, it should be worth the adventure of living."

Young men and women who want to achieve success by work without governmental dictation will agree with President Wriston.

K. of C. Deputy Warns Us

THE recent Supreme Court address of Patrick J. Moynihan, Knights of Columbus state deputy, interests New England.

Branding the President's proposal to appoint six new justices "an indirect threat to religion," he said:

"It shocks every sense of fairness and violates the true spirit of democracy when any party to such litigation seeks the opportunity of securing a favorable decision by adding to the court such members as might be responsive to the executive or legislative viewpoint."

Like thousands of other citizens, he believes the REAL DANGER will come in the future when another President, following the Roosevelt example, may pack the court to war on minorities and to destroy the liberty they now enjoy.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

How the folks would have gaped at that question back in the 90s! Evenings then—save for an occasional church sociable or the weekly band concert, or perhaps the Ladies' Aid Whist Party—were as much alike as a baking of apple tarts.

Elsie Robinson

How plainly it all comes back to you now, Mary and Bill! How sweet and sane it was—how simple and safe.

But have you ever stopped to think that there's no such simplicity or safety for young life today?

No room for homework? No place in our modern program for the quiet, rich living which lays a foundation for character! Home's just a parking station . . . everybody's out in the street or gone to the movies or down to the fights. SO WHAT?

That's what Karen Faber wants to know. Once it didn't matter so much if evenings were empty and aimless—filled with idle drifting and chatter. But now Karen's older—married—filled with lovely ideals about housekeeping.

BUT HOW DOES ONE GO ABOUT MAKING A HOME IN 1937?

"I confess it has me stumped," she cries. "We're happy, my husband and I. Until I was married, my life was filled with various interests. I was always reading . . . taking a course in something . . . making something.

"Now, gradually, it has begun to dawn on me that something is wrong. He's a fine businessman—unusually successful for his age—but he's through with business at five. Then he wants to play.

"But what is all this buying us? All our crowd of young married people, mostly college graduates, are facing the same question. We're really nice people,—not a fast, drinking crowd. We have fine ideals. But even those who have children have no idea of life beyond 'a good time.' What's the answer?" Karen Faber.

"San Francisco."

I don't know the answer, Karen, but I suspect this nation had better discover one pronto—OR ELSE! In the meantime, you get a $10 prize, and it's up to the crowd to supply the various solutions.

What do you—and you—and YOU do with your evenings? Just fun around? Or really make something of them and yourselves.

A PERTINENT QUESTION

Here's another one—plenty serious, if you happen to know your modern world: "MUST THE YOUNG GIRL OF TODAY BE HARD-BOILED IN ORDER TO GET BY?" Donalda Griswold is springing this one, and thereby winning for herself the second $10 prize. It's a real letter—one that goes deep into the heart of this muddle we call life.

"Must a modern girl be hard-boiled to succeed? I know the answer is 'no,' but I fear I found it out too late. It's true, I'm a successful business woman; but in order to become that way, I've had to grow a shell around my heart so long that I fear I've lost that precious touch of femininity so necessary to women.

"For years I plugged to get an education, and let nothing stop me. I've treated my beaux as brothers instead of sweethearts and, through sheer necessity, concentrated entirely on my job. Now, at 29, I'm wondering. Wouldn't I be happier married, with a home, husband and children instead of this desk, telephone and typewriter?

"Donalda Griswold,

"Detroit."

One can have both, Donalda—or can they? Perhaps you've asked two questions instead of one. Let's hear the reaction from the other working gals.

A COMMON PROBLEM

"NOW THAT I'M GRADUATED, WHERE DO I GO FROM HERE?"

There's a question which thousands of young people ask yearly in bitter bewilderment.

"People say we're lazy, but if you'll give the average kid a chance you'll find that they are willing to work their heads off in order to get ahead. I'd like nothing better than to spend half my days and nights while going to school, and all my time in the summer, helping some doctor or working in a hospital, and I know plenty of others who feel the same way.

"When a man goes to prison he's allowed to practice any trade he wishes while serving his time. WHY NOT DO AS MUCH FOR YOUR SONS AND DAUGHTERS AS YOU DO FOR YOUR CRIMINALS?

"Bob Holt."

The Army Day Trio

Copyright, 1937, by American Newspapers, Inc.

Peace and Preparedness are the inseparable companions of the American nation in its determination to KEEP OUT OF WAR.

They complete the invincible trio of AMERICAN SECURITY.

Army Day, which America will observe as the most peaceful nation in the world, will honor the men who stand ready to DEFEND THEIR COUNTRY.

It is also a demonstration of our knowledge that the PEACE WE DESIRE is only attainable THROUGH PREPAREDNESS.

They will never test the mettle of an America PREPARED TO DEFEND ITSELF.

PEACE THROUGH PREPAREDNESS is the American slogan for Army Day.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, April 5—In the manner of Arnold Bennett's journal: M. and I decided on a day's buttermilk diet yesterday but at 4 p. m. I broke down and raided the ice box but she, as always, kept the pledge. A day for sun atheists: Swirling wisps of fog, high wind, drizzles of rain. Typically Londonish.

Frank Crowninshield or someone who knows food was telling of a new restaurant experiment for upper Park Avenue. A place where only light table wines will be served. No music. But food par excellence. It expects mostly a middle aged and elderly patronage. M. jeered she was glad someone was catering to age.

All things being equal, I was telling Will Hays, I choose the movie that shows a Mickey Mouse. And he wondered if I knew one of the high lights in Mickey's creation aside from his humility and stressing the old-fashioned virtue ever triumphant theme.

In the studio where Mickey is turned out there is no private profit, because of an economic theory that it is an enemy of progress. Whilst all employes receive high pay, nobody, and that includes Walt Disney himself, gets an income that would twitch an eyebrow when judged by Hollywood standards.

Speaking of cinema comedy, we have wondered why those Elmer Lane stories of the yokel newspaper correspondent turned out by Richard McCauley have not been filmed. Or have they?

It takes children to deflate the grown-up ego. I thought myself quite a case surtouted in evening coat and top hat tamped just so for a dinner the other evening. But an outrageous moppet in squeaking shoes coming into the entrance turned and said, "Nurse, was that in the department store parade?"

Park Avenue doormen are presenting an interesting costume display. The Whitehall guard effect at the Park Lane must have touched it off. Up a few blocks I noted a shellacked helmet like the police wear in German towns and a London Bobby motif and that of a Grenadier guard.

In a town where front is so emphasized, a doorman's regalia has pulling power. But we wonder if some of them do not feel a bit foolish in their royal ring-adoo, rushing out to open a cab door. They suggest many ideas for Peter Arno hilarities.

I went to a private auction the other day and was outbid on a set of Voltaire but was comforted when I found it contained 97 volumes. That is too much from one author. Too voluminous to be of great account. It suggests the helter skelter of columnists.

I heard Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, noted bibliophile, at Major Bowes's observe that one's private library should be mellow and express a catholic enthusiasm. One should have an affection for Addison as well as Robert Cortes Holliday. For Dr. Johnson as well as Willa Cather. He spoke of authors in symbology. Sarah Jewett expressing the flavor of birch, Louisa May Alcott the flavor of Queen Anne's lace, etc., etc.

Charlie Driscoll was recalling the other day that Mark Twain was once hooted by the "Algonquin Crowd" of that day for his English and his brand of humor.

Among my increasing radio annoyances is the high-tonsiled pronunciation of the news broadcaster H. V. Kaltenborn. I've wondered if he really talks in private conversation in that hifalutin' style he affects on the wireless. He cannot seem to make up his mind whether to speak Oxonian or American English and so juggles them indiscriminately.

An interesting letter from Gilbert White, the Paris painter roughing it in Palm Beach, ended in this abrupt manner: "I get off here!" All letters should end in sudden stop and make you wish there might be more. Too, there's joy in a sincere but not too flowery farewell. I recall this epistolary adieu from a gruff rough-diamond rancher in Texas that constricted a throat twitch: "My good wishes are from deep in a lonely heart."

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

Treasury experts are reported to have started a study of the Federal tax structure. That sounds bad. Such a move usually forecasts more taxes. True, it is said the survey is not directed toward changes in present rates, and President Roosevelt has expressed the hope no tax increases will be necessary. Whenever the taxspenders begin studying tax rates it is time for taxpayers to start worrying.

With revenues running a few hundred million dollars behind estimates and prospects that Federal expenditures during the next fiscal year will be greater than ever, taxpayers may hope that no more burdens will be laid upon them but they cannot count upon that. The present Congress has shown no disposition to cut expenditures. Unless there is a radical change, the total of appropriations is going to be bigger than ever.

Congressman Engel of Michigan, checking up on the $88,000,000 deficit of the Postoffice Department for the last fiscal year, found the mail sent out free under a congressional frank had decreased from 34,000,000 pieces in 1930 to 29,000,000 pieces in 1936. But during the same period the number of pieces of mail sent out under departmental frank jumped from 302,126,259 to more than 669,352,000. A large part of the stuff mailed out by the various departments is nothing but propaganda, advertising some political activity.

The National Socialist Party has indorsed the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization and "United Front" cooperation with working class groups, including the Communist Party. Politics still make strange bedfellows. In this connection it may be recalled that back in January, 1924, the United States Senate had printed as "Document No. 14" a series of articles prepared and published by the United Mine Workers of America of which Lewis then was and still is president.

These articles were an expose of "attempts by Communists to seize the American labor movement." On Page 2 of "Document No. 14" it is stated that one of the major points in the Communist program is "CONVERSION OF ALL CRAFT TRADE-UNIONS INTO SINGLE UNITS OF WORKERS WITHIN AN INDUSTRY KNOWN AS 'INDUSTRIAL UNIONS,' with coordination under a super-Soviet Union owing allegiance to, and accepting the mandates of the Communist International."

Strange as it may seem, converting craft trade-unions into industrial unions is the very thing Lewis is fighting for now.

An unusual compliment has been paid Joseph P. Kennedy, former head of the Securities and Exchange Commission, by the United States Senate. President Roosevelt nominated him as a member of the Maritime Commission. Sentiment is so strong for confirmation of his appointment that the Senate adopted a resolution which has the effect of repealing, so far as he is concerned, a provision of the Merchant Marine Act which some Senators felt made him ineligible. A man's qualifications must be exceptional when Republicans and Democrats join in a legislative declaration of his eligibility to remove a statutory bar against his appointment.

Our Modern Literature

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

It has been so many years since America "went to town." Most of us could tell tales of the plantations, rivers and wind-swept, whistling prairies, farms, mines, forests, posts, if we took time out to remember them. Whitman worked them into his Homeric chant of the democracy of the States, and Carl Sandburg whangs out his hoarse, buoyant lyrics of vast, tumultuous, changing America. But these pieces are all too few.

Edwin C. Hill

We have, properly, great concern for our eroded soil and vanishing forests—too little for the Continental lore which is our heritage. Hence, in the view of the onlooker, a book like "Gentelmen from England," by Maud and Delos Lovelace, is to be commended for those who do not believe that the acid critiques of such writers as Sinclair Lewis are necessarily the last word in our social history.

The writers, both highly urbanized citizens of New York, turn back to their native Minnesota, not only for a cracking good romance, but for a sharp, episodic and carefully etched picture of prairie days. One feels vitality in this backward look at resurgent America, a decade after the Civil War, and has an idea that this particular America must be still on the uptake, no matter who sits down or why.

A SATISFYING WORK

This feeling was heightened for me against the background of Briffault's "Europa," which I had just finished. Here is weary sophistication and the glowworm glow of decadence, patterned loosely in the ultra-Continental wrist-writing technique which, in my opinion, makes it anything but a novel.

Whatever it is, I found satisfaction in turning to the Lovelace opus which, by any criteria applied by intelligent American readers, is deft and workmanlike. It has sharp character delineation, it "marches," it has suspense and it is written into the wide context of such elemental forces as those of "The Good Earth" and "Giants in the Earth."

Put me down for a provincial if you will, but I shamelessly confess great relief when, at the end, the nice boy got the nice girl. It is the story of an English land colony in which hard-drinking, hard-riding British gentry pioneer the Minnesota wilderness, rooked and gouged by land sharks, ruined by grasshoppers, naively ignorant and helpless in many ways, but breaking out their portable bathtubs and red hunting jackets and carrying on to the end, with only two pulling anything out of it all.

One hears Napoleon saying again "Character is destiny," as handsome young Richard Chalmers, the authors' protagonist of decency and integrity, comes through to high ground at the end. In England, they would have been "gentlemen farmers." Hired men did their work. Even the rich, black, new soil of Minnesota wouldn't support that kind of a farm, nor will it today.

A MARKED CHANGE

Just in passing, I wonder if modern psychology isn't working a new note into literature these days. We miss the sharp blacks and whites of villainy and virtue, always observable until a few years ago. Scenic descriptions are stippled into the action with none of the old Landseer backdrops which used to be routine for fiction of this kind. Here's Richard Chalmers, the young Englishman, approaching his new home on the prairie:

"Fences, as the train rolled on, grew more and more infrequent. At first a full half of the land had been confined; then perhaps a fourth of it, and now almost none. It flowed as freely and boundlessly as all pastures did in the world's beginning. Timber was growing scarcer, too. Occasionally, near a settler's cabin, a planted grove made a purple rectangular blur against the universal whiteness.

"Evening brought no glow to the west, twilight fell abruptly and then wastes of prairie were indeed like wastes of ocean, cold, comfortless and empty."

Mr. and Mrs. Lovelace also collaborated on "One Stayed at Welcome."

Nation Hails Army Day

By James T. Williams, Jr.

O Lord God of Hosts, stretch forth, we pray Thee, Thine almighty arm to strength and protect the soldiers of our country.

—From a prayer for the Army.

Up and down the United States the household of the nation is again called upon to observe April 6 as Army Day.

This call has gone out to the people for the tenth successive year from the President and the Congress of the United States, the Secretary of War and the Chief of Staff of the Army.

Following the examples of the governors, mayors of cities and towns throughout the Union are helping to make the tenth annual observance of Army Day all that it ought to be.

The President, in a recent letter, succinctly sets forth the reasons why this anniversary in the national calendar of American patriotism should be observed by all sorts and conditions of true Americans throughout the Union. These are his words:

"Army Day, which is annually observed on April 6, should serve to remind us of the splendid service rendered by our soldiers in peace and war during our century and a half of national existence.

"By their courage and sacrifice the members of our Army have kept our country secure in half a dozen major wars.

"Through their constructive labors in a score of unrelated fields they have served the nation well in time of peace.

"In opening to settlement our great domain, in constructing canals and improving navigation, in extending our knowledge of preventive medicine, and in contributing to the advancement of science in numerous other ways, the Army has written a brilliant record of constructive service on the pages of American history."

It is to the everlating glory of the Army that its officers and men have been the target in recent years for insidious attacks by a polyglot assortment of sappers, plotting to undermine American institutions.

CAUSE FOR REJOICING

It enchances the distinction of the profession of arms, so worthily represented by the American Army, that it rejoices in the enmity of that melancholy minority of the misguided to whom nothing in their earthly pilgrimage seems worth defending with their lives.

It adds to the glory of the United States Military Academy at West Point and to the laurels of the "The Brotherhood of the Brave," which includes the company of its graduates, that the Academy has received in recent years the abuse of crackpot theorists and greedy spoilsmen who pollute too many public offices in the country.

And it will endear anew the Army to the great American family when some future Congress lays bare the ugly fact that no small part of the propaganda subversive of the common defense, with which this country has been flooded in recent years, has been of alien origin or has been aided and abetted by alien agencies.

With each succeeding year the observance of April 6 as Army Day will bring home to the people the reasons why they have for taking pride in the Army, and for encouraging young Americans to offer themselves for training with the colors.

This observance of Army Day will also enable the people to see more clearly who rightly represent them in the Congress on questions involving the common defense and who represent the sappers whose only interest is the Army or the Navy is to play pork barrel politics with their supply bills.

PRAISE MERITED

There is new reason in recent years for the people everywhere to unite in demonstrating once a year the sincerity of their support of the officers and men of the American Army.

The reason is to be found in the increasing success o fthe Citizens Military Training Camps and of their offspring—the Civilian Conservation Corps.

The success of both these ventures is chiefly due to the United States Army.

Without the leadership of the Army, without the protection and guidance of its trained personnel, without the support of the War Department, the Citizens' Military Training Camps would not have lasted more than a few years and the Civilian Conservation Corps would have long ago fallen victim to political racketeers instead of being what it is—an agency worthy of the pride and confidence of the whole people.
